Official questions rate hikes

Westland Cable Commissioner David Moranty questioned whether Media One properly notified cable subscribers about. rate changes effective in February and May.

BY DARRELL CLEM

Westland cable TV subscribers may be paying for rate hikes improperly imposed by Media One, formerly Continental Cablevision, a company that serves nearly 26,000 city customers, a local official said.

Westland Cable Commissioner David Moranty has questioned whether Media One gave customers proper notice for rate changes in February and May.

Moranty told the Observer that if his concerns prove true - he believes Westland cable subscribers should receive a rebate or a credit on future bills.

A Media One representative said Thursday that he believes customers have received proper notice of rate

Mehl wants to oust mayor in election

This is the second of three profiles of Westland mayoral candidates competing for two slots in the Sept. 9 primary election. The series will conclude Thursday with a story about incumbent Mayor Robert Thomas.

Kenneth Mehl argues that he can beat incumbent Mayor Robert Thomas in 1997 — a feat that was unattainable during Mehl's mayoral bid in 1993.

In Westland politics, much can change in four years. Mehl, charging that Thomas has stumbled and lost popularity during his second term, said he believes he can thwart the mayor's bid for an unprecedented third four-year term.

Mehl, a 50-year-old senior product engineer for General Motors Corp., said he believes that voters are finally learning that Thomas, 46, has created "an illusion" of Westland as a city without problems.

As administration officials tout Westland as the place to be, Mehl argues that the city can be better if

Budget deficit looms for schools after Engler veto

BY DARRELL CLEM STAFF WRITER

Gov. John Engler has vetoed a special allocation that would have provided $6 million over three years to Wayne-Westland schools.

State Sen. Loren Bennett's office announced the veto Friday, signaling defeat for a plan to help Wayne-Westland officials avoid a budget deficit for the coming school year,

The loss follows an earlier disappointment that occurred in July, when House-Senate negotiators slashed Bennett's original plan to provide a special allocation of $20.8 million over eight years for Wayne-

Engler's action stems from a Michigan Supreme Court ruling that will cost the state some $200 million for an old lawsuit filed by 84 school districts.

Neither Wayne-Westland Superintendent Duane Moore nor school board president Debra Fowlkes could be immediately reached for comment.

Board vice president Mathew McCusker called the latest development a major setback for Wayne-Westland school finances.

"We're disappointed," he said. "In a way, I guess I was waiting for something like this to happen. There is some element of predictability

The Michigan Supreme Court ruled that the state owes 84 districts for failing in the past to provide full funding for special education programs, among other services. The court said in its decision that compensation should be close to $200 million, rather than a lower court's earlier $800 million tab.

Candidates criticize Thomas for promotion of live-in companion

BY DARRELL CLEM STAFF WRITER

Two Westland mayoral hopefuls trying to unseat Mayor Robert Thomas have criticized him for promoting his live-in companion, Jill Runkle, from executive secretary to city purchasing agent.

Thomas has vehemently defended his decision, saying it would have been unfair of him not to promote Runkle simply because of their relationship. He dismissed criticism from challengers Dixie Johnson McNa and Kenneth Mehl.

The three candidates are competing for two slots in the Sept. 9 primary; the two survivors will square off in the-Nov. 4 general election.

Runkle's salary rose $6,423 last August after Thomas promoted her from a $35,209 secretarial job to her new $41,632. position as purchasing agent, according to figures requested from the city's personnel department.

Runkle's salary rose to $43,577 on Jan. 1 when a new pay plan became effective for mayoral appointees, and she received another raise March 10 that put her annual earnings at $46,140, according to the department.

"I don't think what the mayor did was right," challenger Dixie Johnson McNa said. "I don't believe his girlfriend was qualified to be purchasing agent. She was a secretary, and he just up and appointed her to this new job."

McNa raised the issue during an interview with the Observer, suggesting ethical and moral problems with Thomas' actions.

"I think voters should look at the morals of elected officials," she said.

Mayoral challenger Kenneth Mehl, a former 12-year Westland City Council member, also criticized Runkle's appointment during a separate

"There is no basis for her to be promoted other than the fact that she is his girlfriend,"

Mehl suggested that Thomas may have crossed "a fine line of nepotism" for giving Runkle a possibly "unfair advantage" for the purchasing agent job.

Thomas said he appointed Runkle because, as his executive secretary, she dealt with "a multitude of things" including city bidding procedures.

"She has a good head on her shoulders," he said. "I knew that she could do the job. I wasn't going to punish her for (our) relationship."

Thomas noted that Runkle, as his secretary, gained the expertise she needed to become purchasing agent. She was as qualified as any previous purchasing agent, he said.

An attempt to reach Runkle was unsuccessful.

Westland City Council members didn't have to vote to confirm the mayor's choice of Runkle as purchasing agent. Even so, council members haven't raised any concerns - publicly, at least - about Runkle's performance.

Runkle became a city employee on Feb. 12, 1990, when she was hired as an administrative secretary in the mayor's office.

"I didn't even know who she was," Thomas said.

McNa noted that Thomas and his wife divorced after the mayor met Runkle.

Runkle became the mayor's executive secretary on July 1, 1995 — a position she held until she was named purchasing agent.

Thomas chose Runkle to replace former purchasing agent Richard Dittmar, who became public services director replacing the late Carl Clark, who left his job due to an ill-

12-year Westland City Council member, said during an interview with the Observer.

Mehl's critics have long viewed him as being too negative and of being a thorn in the side of a popular mayor whose supporters believe has improved life for Westland residents. Mehl often raised controversial issues before his last council term expired Dec. 31, 1993.

Mehl dismisses those negative perceptions and, instead, portrays himself as a leader who stood up to wasteful spending and government greed."

In the end, voters will have to decide for themselves as Mehl and political newcomer Dixie Johnson McNa, 52, compete with Thomas in the Sept. 9 primary. The top two vote-getters will advance to the Nov. 4 general election.

Mehl, a divorced father who has two adult children and two grandchildren, has been a Westland resident for 28 years. He bought a house here after he finished U.S. Army duties that included a one-year stint in Viet-

"I never had any regrets about being there," he said. "The Army helps you grow up fast. You have to do that."

College-educated, Mehl is a Detroit native whose father worked as a laborer and whose mother stayed home to care for children. Mehl was one of five children — four now living.

"I am a product of the Detroit Public Schools," Mehl said proudly. He plans to take a leave of absence from his engineer postif elected Westland mayor.

Mehl won his first bid for the Westland City Council in 1981, after serving a six-year appointment on the Westland Planning Commission. He also has been involved in numerous activities such as the Westland Summer Festival and youth athletic pro-

Kenneth Mehl -mayoral candidate

Mehl said his history of involvement qualifies him to serve as mayor, and he has hit the campaign trail armed with numerous issues that he hopes will win him the support he needs to defeat Thomas. Specifically:

■ Mehl accused the Thomas roads. administration of "spending money foolishly" on bloated labor contracts, fat retirement pensions and administration "perks" such as too many leased cars and cellular phones. He questioned whether some city officials such as the finance director need a leased car. Thomas has defended his spending practices as responsible. ■ Mehl said Westland should be run more like a private industry, which has seen pay hikes tied to cost-of-living increases rather than double-digit raises.

. Mehl accused Thomas of chipping away at the city's budget surplus, currently $1.5 million according to Finance Director Michael Gorman. "The mayor is spending more than what's coming in," Mehl said. Thomas has described the city as financially healthy.

■ Mehl called for more youth programs, particularly in the summer. "We need to do more to get the kids off the street," he said. The mayor has touted programs that he started, such as after-school activities at middle schools and Youth Assistance for troubled youngsters.

■ Mehl also suggested that the city should seek grants to provide summer jobs for youngsters.

■ Mehl accused the mayor of spending too much time away from his office and indicated that Thomas may be shirking his duties. He also questioned why the mayor has raised a campaign war chest. Thomas has said he wouldn't be doing his job if he sat behind a desk all day, and he said he expects to spend as much as $50,000 on his re-election.

Mehl charged that the city must begin to fix subdivision roads. Thomas has said his administration has made strides and will continue to improve Mehl said all city departments need to become more efficient and productive. Thomas has already touted improvements to the public services department, among others.

■ Mehl cited a need for more police officers. "The question is how to pay for them," he said.

Mehl pledged that, if elected as mayor, he would be more responsive than Thomas to the Westland City Council and would involve council members in more discussion of issues. Thomas said he has good working relations with the council.

■ Mehl criticized Thomas for raising citizen expectations that he can't meet. Specifically, Mehl said the mayor indicated that victims of a north-end sewer-system flood in February would have their homes restored within four to six weeks. "It's still not resolved," Mehl said. Thomas has noted that insurance adjusters are now settling claims with homeowners.

■ Mehl called for more efforts to address blight that upsets some Norwayne area residents in the city's south end. ■ Mehl touted his record as a council member, saying he helped to keep finances in check. He also said he played a role in bringing industrial and residential development to Westland.

Mehl plans to emphasize his strengths as he campaigns for Thomas' seat. And he has vowed that, if elected, "I will make things better."

Accompanied by adult passengers, children 7 to 12 years old will drive tractors that will go no faster than 5 mph during Kmart's second annual "Kids Race Against Drugs." The program tours major U.S. cities and provides a family-oriented racing tour similar to the professional NASCAR and Indy racing cars circuit.

Children compete on the modified lawn tractors to win scholarships and other prizes and compete in the national championships in January 1998.

"It's just to get the kids out to have a little fun" during an event that has an anti-drugs message. Westland general store manager Dennis Pelty said Tuesday.

An obstacle course will be set up near the front of Kmart, and That will happen Aug. 9-10 at the event is scheduled for 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 9., and from noon to 6 p.m. on Sunday, Aug. 10.

> Children only need to show up with a parent or adult guardian to participate; no advance registration is necessary, Pelty said. The event is free.

During the race every rider must wear a seat belt and helmet. No loose clothing or sandals is permitted. Tractors are modified by removing the mowing blades and are governed by a maximum speed of 5 mph.

The racers will learn how to operate the vehicles, then test driving agility as they maneuver the tractors through a 75foot by 185-foot track with hairpin turns, barriers, speed bumps, bridges and tunnels. Racers will compete against a highly sophisticated time clock which times the racers right

Don't worry about erratic drivers as young as 7, however. Adults who ride along with the youngsters will have the ability to stop the tractor at any time during the race.

Entrants will compete in one of three age categories:7-8 years old, 9-10 years old, and 11-12 years old. The driver with the fastest time in each age group in each market will advance to the national championships in Orlando in January 1988. Kmart will send each winner and three family members to the event.

Grand prize winners from each age group will be awarded a $10,000 college scholarship

For every child that participates, Westland's Kmart will donate $5 to the Westland Police Department's DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) program, Pelty said.

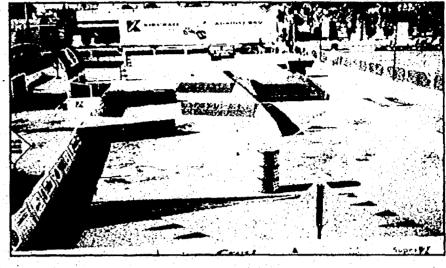

"The money stays in the community," he said. DARE representatives will be trackside interacting with children and their families to educate them about the dangers of drug abuse.

Children who join the race against drugs will receive a free T-shirt, cap and literature about the dangers of drugs, Pelty said.

Kmart Kids Race Against Drugs was developed through The Kmart Family Foundation, a nonprofit organization aimed at educating and preventing drug abuse. In 1996 the race donated $500,000 to local drug abuse charities across the country.

Moranty also questioned whether Media One followed a Westland cable ordinance calling for rate increases to be posted in newspapers.

Moranty conceded that some rules may supersede others, but he said his concerns raised possible problems that should be explored.

He again insisted that Media One gave notification of rate changes in bulk mail, which he noted "does not reach every home.'

Corporate affairs manager Maria Holmes said during a separate conversation that "all we have is a verbal

Minutes of the commission's June meeting quoted Moranty of saying "it appears that Media One has been in violation" of rules pertaining to ratehike notices.

The allegations against Media One and the former Continental Cablevision are only the latest to be raised publicly. Some Westland customers have long complained that, compared to their Canton Township counterparts, they pay more money for less service.

Ed Turner, Westland Cable Commission chairman, told Holmes during the June meeting that public opinion of Media One has reached an "all-time low," according to meeting minutes.

Moranty has called it unfair that the city of Westland sometimes gets blamed by customers for issues, such as rate increases, that he said are the responsibility of Media One.

Cable company spokesman Bill Black told the Observer on Thursday that he believes Moranty, as a cable commissioner, should "get all the facts" before he raises questions that cast Media One in a negative light.

Black maintained that rate increases have been properly handled. He said it isn't the first time that Moranty has tried to publicly embarrass Media One with issues that, according to Black, have been unsubstantiated.

McNamara wants bonds to help fix county roads

BY TONY BRUSCATO STAFF WRITER

Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara is expected to publicly announce a $60-million roads plan of his own in an attempt to fix much of the county's infrastructure.

The plan, which has been forwarded to Wayne County commissioners, calls for a three-year bond issue to solve the county's road problems before they get

"Our plan is to meet with local governments and let them know we will have monies available, and ask them to kick in a percentage if we come up with the lion's share," said McNamara. "Hopefully we can come up with $75-80-million in road repairs over the next three years."

McNamara's proposal comes on the heels of Gov. John Engler's 4-cent per gallon gas tax hike which became effective Friday.

"Four cents was never enough," continued McNamara. "We should have gone to 8-cents. I think the gasoline companies would have absorbed some of the increase from a competitive standpoint."

McNamara almost singlehandedly tried to stall the increase, which eventually passed through the state legisla-

"We figured it was such a bad deal we'd be better off with no deal," said McNamara.

Of his $60-million bond issue for roads, McNamara said he's always had the plan but was hoping state money would help fund it. When it became "obvious that wasn't going to happen", McNamara said he decided to put his plan into action.

"We want to rebuild and widen Seven Mile to five lanes," said McNamara. "Other major projects would include the resurfacing of Farmington and Five Mile roads. A part of the plan is to do roads that are savable, that if we don't do now will have to be replaced in a few years."

McNamara says there are some current bond issues that will soon be paid off, allowing for use of that money to pay the proposed roads bonds.

At least one county commissioner is willing to look at McNamara's plan.

"I always opposed the gas tax, but I haven't ruled out the bond issue because it's not a tax," said

Commissioner Thaddeus McCotter. R-Livonia, whose district includes Plymouth and Plymouth Township. "The county needs to look at ways to take care of itself, instead of being dependent on the state."

"Wayne County, because of its growth, is giving more in tax money to the state than it's getting back for road improvements," added McCotter. "All that construction and increased traffic is putting a lot of stress on our roads."

But not everyone supports the corporate welfare schemes. My

'My constituents are sick and tired of Big Ed's shenanigans always playing politics ... My constituents have legitimate needs. Their roads are terrible and they have been for far too long.'

> Bruce Patterson. county commissioner

Commissioner Bruce Patterson; R-Canton Township, in a press release, criticized the McNamara Administration for seeking a bond issue which "requires the taxpayers to dig down even deeper than ever."

Patterson called McNamara's plan "politically motivated."

"My constituents are sick and tired of Big Ed's shenanigans always playing politics and messing around with tax increases, millages for parks and constituents have legitimate needs. Their roads are terrible and they have been for far too long."

Interestingly enough, the 4cent tax motorists are paying at the pumps will do nothing to increase road projects in Wayne County.

According to Wayne County Department of Public Services spokesman John Roach, the $6million county officials will receive from the new gas tax goes to replace the $6-million lost when the state's Build Michigan Plan ended last year as the result of sunset legislation.

So, while state officials are touting the improvements to be made on 392 miles of state roads, the end result for Wayne County is that the money was needed to retain the status quo, not for improvements.

"I'm not surprised," said Debra Demeester of Livonia, as she pumped gas at the Shell station at Five Mile and Newburgh. "There always seems to be a shift in where the money goes instead of having more money." Demeester wants to see Michigan get more of its fair share in federal funds for roads.

"Some federal officials need to drive on our roads," Demeester commented.

Wayne County, according to Roach, has a budget of approximately $100-million for the county's road program...about half of which actually goes to fixing and improving thoroughfares.

Even if Wayne County were to get a windfall of $6-million, it wouldn't even come close to fixing 160 miles of road which need resurfacing.

"For that amount of money we could widen two-and-a-half miles of roadway from two to five lanes," said Roach. "Or, we could resurface 5 1/2 miles of five-lane road."

In a perfect world, Roach says it would take about $350-million to fix all of Wayne County's 720 miles of roadway.

Basin removes most sewage before water hits Rouge

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK STAFF WRITER

In 1989, 7.8 billion gallons of raw sewage were dumped into the Rouge River at 168 locations in the Rouge River Basin in Wayne and Oakland counties.

Slowly but surely, those locations of combined sewer overflows - outfalls of combined sanitary and storm sewers that flow into the Rouge River after heavy rainstorms — are being controlled either through sewer separation or piped into retention basins.

While Livonia, Garden City, Plymouth Township and Westland have separated or are working on separating CSOs into sanitary and storm water systems, Redford is one of eight communities that house a new retention basin, located on Lola Drive just east of Beech Daly, between Five and Six Mile roads.

Redford's basin now controls four outfalls, where sewage once emptied directly into the Rouge. Seventeen other outfalls will be controlled by year's end by five other basins in Detroit and western Wayne County.

More than $350 million is riding on the basins and separation. About $207 million in federal money was earmarked to control the CSOs in the Rouge River Wet Weather Demonstration Project.

County officials and engineering consultants hope they can "demonstrate" that a combination of the methods of cleaning up the Rouge of raw sewage can be a national model for other urban areas throughout the United States.

"This is the largest project of this kind in the country," said Jim Murray, director of Wayne County's Department of Environment.

An age-old problem

The problem stemmed from combined sewer overflows, sanitary and storm sewers that were combined and emptied into the Rouge River when sewer pipes to wastewater treatment plants filled. Built when many homes were constructed in the 1940s and 1950s, the CSOs fill and dump tons of raw sewage each

"It was either that or flooded basements," said James Messineo, project engineer with Wade-Trim, an engineering consulting firm working on the project.

Messineo was one of several Wade-Trim officials overseeing a part of the project to help remove most of the overflow from the Rouge, by building a $15 million retention basin adiacent to the Glenhurst Golf Course.

Basins in Inkster and Dearborn Heights cost $19.3 and $20.1 million, while a 22-million gallon facility in Dearborn at Hubbell and Southfield in Dearborn cost $50 million. Six of seven basins in Wayne County cost $135.6 million.

flowed into the Rouge twice since June and four times since it opened last year. Water has entered the basin and activated it, processing water on about 40 occasions.

Discharges are fewer

Murray and other county officials believe their variety of methods will be more cost-effective than total sewer separation, yet still clean a majority of the water.

"We're trying to demonstrate what is the technical level and quality of discharge," said Murray. "We went from 100 to 120 discharges to maybe 10 times a year."

Samples are taken every 15 minutes, collected in plastic tubes, refrigerated, then sent to a lab. The number of samples depend on the size of the storms.

By the end of a storm, or directly after one, a second dose of rain usually comes up clean because the first storm contains the most sewage.

The system also works to ensure the smell that used to plague neighborhoods near CSOs is eliminated.

Bleach is applied to the water with four chemical feed pumps.

The Redford basin has over- Another pump helps as an air scrubber, in which water and sodium hypochloride combine and remove the stench from the air, so it isn't released into the neighborhood or nearby golf course. A backup generator with 1.5 million watts is located upstairs and already has been activated three times. "Outages are very common," said Tim O'Rourke, a Wade-Trim senior associate and basin project manager. "So you need a backup source of power,"

You wouldn't know all this activity is taking place, beneath four feet of soil on the seventh fairway at Glenhurst. Looking at an exit pipe, Wade-Trim officials know that that water is clean, but wonder about the public's impression, since CSOs have existed for so long.

"They sometimes get the wrong impression of what we're doing with the stream," Messineo said.

Murray said Wayne County still was negotiating the permit. He did not expect the Rouge will meet Clean Water requirements by 2005, but expected the requirements could be met by 2012.

How it works

The bar screens are set on the teeth of chains. The chains extend between the bottom and second floor of the basin. The chains are turned on, and the screens dip into the water to clean it of large debris.

"The chain rotates like a bike chain," said Tim O'Rourke, a Wade-Trim senior associate and basin project manager. "These things rotate in a storm and then dump onto a conveyer."

But the bar screens, large steel grates each sized about 600-square feet, clear out only the large debris from the water, as these grates have smaller openings of about 1 1/2 by 3 1/4 inches.

The conveyer empties into a. Dumpster. The Dumpster is emptied into a landfill that is certified for wastewater treatment plant refuse, while the water flows into a wet well, another holding basin for the goes in the river.

Sodium hypochlorite is applied, or common household bleach, to kill common bacteria and disinfect the water when the water first arrives is in the basin's compartments or wet wells.

"You want to have as much contact time and adjust the rate (of bleach) so that all the bacteria is gone and no chlorine or chlorine residuals are in the river," said Messineo. "You want to kill (bacteria) fast, but you don't want too much, so that it

"That's something else we are testing for."

But the application cannot kill too many microorganisms in the water, because the Detroit wastewater treatment process assumes those microorganisms are in the water and are actually part of the treatment process.

The samples are part of the requirements issued by the Department of Environmental Quality. Water is sampled several times during the process, before bleach and the bar screens.

From the wet well, five vertical pumps transport the screened water to what is called a "splitter box." One pump is a backup, and during storms, like the one on July 2, four of the five are activated. Each pump can minute. The splitter box divides the water with 50 percent of the water to a 35-foot swirl concentrator, which swirls the water, using centrifugal force to remove large solids from the water. "On the outside is the dirty stuff, and the cleaner water is in the center," said Messineo. The outside flow carries the sewage to the interceptor, or the pipe to the wastewater treatment plant. A sample is taken after the swirl process.

The other half, the cleaner, and treated, water, goes to transport 17,100 gallons per another holding tank 60 by 180 feet. That water is also sampled and sent to the river through an channel or a weir during overflow conditions. A wall next to the weir acts as a skimmer basin area, to clean up any overflow. The basins also use small bulldozers with shovels to scoop up and clear any debris from the wet wells that may bypass the bar screens.

> Tipping buckets flush the walls and floors once the water subsides.

> All of the basin is controlled by computer.

French Burgundies hit stride with 1995 vintage

he decade of the 1990s has been generous to France's Burgundy wine region. Vintage 1990 started the run. It was followed by high-quality red wines in 1993. By autumn, the full complement of excellent 1995s will be in the U.S., and from available evidence, it will be followed by equally top wines in 1996 arriving a year later. A short crop in 1995 made many of the wines scarce. A larger crop in 1996 should satisfy worldwide demand.

Why do crop levels vary significantly from one vintage to another? Weather is the principal culprit. Early spring weather at the beginning of the 1995 grape growing cycle, produced a generous number of buds on the vines. Bad weather came mid-May. It snowed May 13 in Meursault. Two days later, frost, then the weather remained cool until the official first day of summer. This resulted in a long and extended flowering of the vines with inevitable losses due to poor setting of grape bunches. Poor set results in fewer berries. on each bunch and an automatic reduction of the matured berries. This is the case in 1995 and from our tastings of barrel samples from a number of producers, the wines, particularly the red Burgundies are handsome renditions, worth consideration.

"The 1995 Burgundy wines will be long-lived," said 33year-old Louis-Fabrice Latour whose family owns Maison Louis Latour, a Burgundy house in Beaune that has passed from father to son since 1797. Two white wines from the Latour portfolio are particularly impressive: 1995 Meursault $31 with its gentle toasty oak characters over solid fruit and crisp finish; and 1995 Puligny-Montrachet $35.50 showcasing balanced complexity with citrus blossom, appley aromatics with extracted fruit flavors.

For a bit more money, there's a big move up in character, extract and richness from two premiers cru with the same appellations. Both the 1995 Meursault Premier Cru Chateau de Blagny $38 and 1995 Puligny-Montrachet Champgains $40 exemplify a premier crus status.

"In Burgundy, vintage 1995 is unusual because it's very good for both white and red wines," said Michael Quinttus of Kobrand Corporation, owners of Maison Louis Jadot. Because of similar climatic influences, Saint-Aubin isoften considered a poor man's Puligny-Montrachet. In 1995, Jadot Saint-Aubin $24 more than fits that billing. It's a seafood chardonnay, not a sipper. Unique among the Jadot whites is 1995 Beaune-Greves Le Clos Blanc $46. This wine has it all - fruit, toasty oak, layered complexity, spice notes, length and finesse. It's labeled "blanc" because Beaune-Greves is generally pinot noir, a red Burgundy.

Recommended reds

Among Jadot's 1995 reds we recommend: Chorey-Les-Beaune $17 for its bright fruit aromas and flavors; 1995 Fixin $19 for its charm; 1995 Pommard $35 for its solid fruit profile; Beaune Premier Cru $28 for vanilla notes and

SUMMER'S HERE AND WE'RE ALL EARS FOR By Keely Wygonik ary Hauk of Canton, a third-generation farmer, has eaten tons of corn. "I love it raw," she said. "Just picked corn from the field is the sweetest. People don't believe the taste." Hauk grows 280 acres of sweet corn, which she wholesales, and sells at Mary's Farm Market on the southwest corner of Ford Road at Beck. Hauk plants corn in intervals so it's available from July to Sep-"The better corn comes in later, in the middle of August" she said. "It gets better and better as the season goes, but even the early varieties are good. They're freshly picked, and better than the stuff that's shipped in." Freezer corn will be available the end of August, or first part of September. This variety, which is good for eating too, freezes well because the ears and kernels are bigger, and the sugar content is excep-

To pick a good ear of corn hold it in your hand, draw the other hand along the length of the ear. "If it feels spongy, it's a dry ear," said Hauk. "Ripe ears feel solid."

Everyone wants to know what's the best way to cook corn. The answer depends on who you talk to.

"People always cook corn too long," said Hauk. "They cook the sugar right out of the corn, and make it starchy. Then they wonder why it doesn't taste good."

Corn varieties have gotten sweeter. Before the development of hybrids, 7 to 10 minutes of cooking time was required for a tender ear. That's no longer

"Heat speeds the conversion of sugar to starch, so the longer you cook sweet corn the tougher and starchier you're making it," said Betty Fussell author of "Crazy for Corn: More than 170 Recipes for America's Favorite Grain," (HarperPerennial), "Salt

Hauk drops ears into a pot of boiling water and cooks for 5 to 7 minutes. "People used to always overcook vegetables," she said. "Less is better."

To steam corn, Fussell removes the outer layer of husks, and drops the ears "four to six at a time" in a pot of boiling water. "Leave for no more than 30 seconds. Drain the ears well and put on a platter. "With the husks on you are in fact steaming the kernels inside, but if you prefer to use a conventional steamer to avoid immersing the ears in water, don't steam too long. Length of time depends on how many ears in what size steamer. but it may take as much as 5 to 10 minutes for the ears to heat through."

Grilling corn always opens a round of "friendly" discussions around the barbecue or campfire. Should you soak the ears, husks and all, in water before grilling, or just throw them on the fire?

Fussell says she doesn't like to soak "because that steams the corn on the grill. I prefer to either grill the corn in the husks without soaking, or to husk it and grill the nude ears directly over the heat. Husks-on corn takes about twice as long as husks off. On a hot grill the corn takes about 6 to 8 minutes with the husks on and about 3 minutes with the husks off."

Hauk soaks her ears for at least 20 minutes, but longer is OK too, and wraps the ears in foil before placing on the grill for "10 to 15 minutes at the most."

attractive finish; and Vosne Romanée $35, gorgeous, sexy fruit, big flavors, and very ageable. From Maison Joseph Drouhin founded in 1880 and located in Beaune, we were able to taste 1996 white wines along with 1995 reds. As a comparative experience, from among the 1996 whites, you might want to try the Saint-Aubin $25, Meursault $36 and Puligny-Montrachet Les Folatieres $53 because we've suggested these appellations from other producers above. Among the 1995 reds, the Drouhin wines come across more tannic. Patrick Séré, Executive Vice-President of Dreyfus Ashby & Co., importers of the Drouhin wines, agreed that tannins were evident in the barrel samples. However, he suggested this portended longevity. We're not as confident of this. Therefore, among the 1995 red wines that showed both good structure and balance, we recommend Chorevles-Beaune $17.50 for its early drinkability; Beaune Clos des Mouches $41 for its bright red fruit, balance and length; and Charmes-Chambertin $79 for layered complexity, generous framework, round tannins and eminent ageability.

Summer drinks make memories

Remember when you were a kid, how there was always one house on the block where all the kids played? And how, in the summer, you'd all have red, purple, or orange mustaches, from drinking your favorite thirst quencher?

When I think of summertime drinks, that's what I think of: Faygo pop and Kool-Aid. They're the first things that come to my mind, because they're the things my friends and I drank as kids, when summer was SUMMER and fall seemed so far away. Other soft drinks have come and gone over the years, but those two have stood the test of time.

DONNA MULCAHY

Faygo, for example, is celebrating its 90th anniversary this year. The company was founded by the Feigenson family in Detroit in 1907, and it's been owned by the National Beverage Corporation since 1986. I got this history from Faygo president Stan Sheridan when I interviewed him by phone recently. To celebrate the anniversary,

Faygo is doing several things. · A mystery-shopper campaign will reach Detroit-area grocery stores by the end of September. When a Faygo mystery shopper sees someone in a grocery check-out line with a bottle of Faygo in his or her cart, the mystery shopper will pay for all of the groceries in that cart, up to $90.

A contest for retailers will present prizes to the five that have the best Faygo displays. • A new 30-second commercial, airing this summer in Jackson, Lansing and other states, features snippets of old Faygo commercials, including the memorable "Boat Song" ads that ran in the 1970s. Recall the commercials that featured a riverboat and a barber-shop singer who crooned, "Remember when you were a kid, well part of you still is, and that's why we make Faygo . . .

If the new commercial airs here, it probably will be in September, Sheridan said. Faygo's share of the Detroit-area soft drink market is about 12 percent.

The company's main bottling plant remains in Detroit. Products from that plant are shipped to stores throughout Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, western Pennsylvania, southeast Wisconsin, southeast New York and part of Ontario. A few other National Beverage Corporation plants in other states make a relatively small amount of Faygo products for distribution elsewhere.

Faygo currently has more than 50 soft drink and sparkling water flavors (including carbonated, non-carbonated, regular and diet beverages). This spring, it added two new, non-carbonated drinks: Ohana Lemonade and Ohana Orange. Ohana means "family" in Hawaiian.

The lemonade "has been the biggest surprise we've ever seen," he said "We can't keep it in stock, it's that popular."

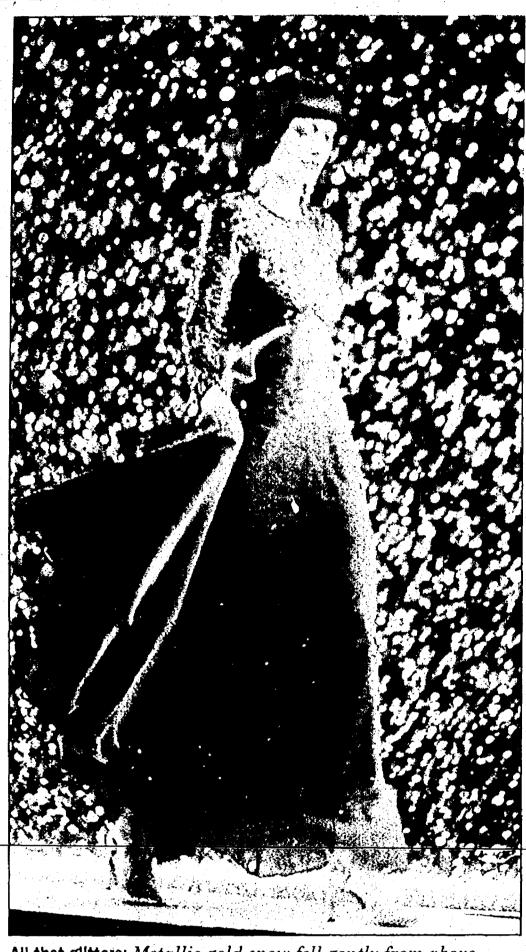

In fact, it's giving Red Pop, which has traditionally been Faygo's most popular product, a good run for its money, Sheridan said. If you're having trouble finding a particular Faygo product, try Farmer Jack and Meijer stores. They tend to have the widest selections of Faygo drinks according to Sheridan. More information about Faygo can be found on the National Beverage Corporation's web site at: www.nationalbeverage.com/products/faygo.html.

Many sites on the internet are devoted to Kool-Ald. The official one, however, is part of the Kraft Foods web site at: www.kraftfoods.com. While the Kraft site is pretty cool, the Kool-Aid pages are short on the brand's history and long on promotional information for Kool-Aid's three new flavors, Grape Berry Splash, Soarin' Strawberry Lemonade and Roarin' Raspberry-Cranberry. For more information about Kool-Aid's history, and just about everything else you've ever wanted to know about the drink that's supposed to be served by the mom at the house where all the kids play (according to the commercials I drank up as a child), try the following unofficial web site: www.cs.ruu.nl/wais/html/nadir/food/Kool-Aid-fag.html.

That's where I learned how to get rid of Kool-'Aid (and Faygo) mustaches. Toothpaste on a washcloth. It's supposed to work every time.

For information on soft drinks in general, including who makes what, check out the National Soft Drink Association's web site at www.nsda.org.

Fash Bash '97

Guests enjoy their first look at fall

The fall shopping season begins with Hudson's presentation of Fash Bash, unveiling what's in store for customers. This year, Fashion Takes Off, was a very practical guide to an urban wardrobe, but the real show was in the crowd.

BY SUSAN DEMAGGIO

Fash Bash '97 called on Mother Earth and New Age wisdoms to inspire all the beautiful people in the art-loving fashion crowd last Wednesday night at the Fox Theatre in Detroit.

But most agreed that though the show was thoroughly entertaining, they were not intrigued by the (big yaaawn) fashions that Hudson's selected for the show.

Fash Bash, now in its 28th year, is the town's first look at the new fall season, presented by Hudson's in an hour-long theatrical celebration complete with lights, music, special effects and entertaining surprises. It doubles as the annual fund-raiser for the Detroit Institute of Arts, chaired by members of the Founders Junior Council.

"The technology and special effects used in the show kept it upbeat, moving right along. But, by comparison, I thought the clothes were pretty boring," said Christy Henricks of Milford. "I didn't see any real changes from last year."

Her friend, Billie Barkman of Livonia, said the best fashions were the evening gowns presented for the finale' - "gorgeous gowns," she quipped.

A local fashion director who begged anonymity because she works with many of the designers featured in the show, shook her head and sighed, "The real show was outside the theater, peoplewatching to see what everyone else wore. The fashion inside was not too exciting."

In a departure from shows past, "Fashion Takes Off" was presented in segments that showcased individual collections from Nautica, Tommy Hilfiger, Dana Buchman, BCBG, Gene Meyer, Greg Norman and Ellen Tracy. A bigger collection of menswear made it to the stage, too, this year. The acts were punctuated by thoughtful performances by the Red Drum Woman Singers celebrating Native American culture; Apogee, dancers who spring from a trampoline to create striking visual displays; a Tai Chi class; and The Heart of the Beast Puppet Theatre with their haunting, larger-than-life puppets.

The audience donned 3-D eye glasses for the video transitions throughout the show. The models' movements were telecast behind them on multiple screens serving as high-tech backdrops.

Designers David Chu and Gene Meyer made guest appearances.

Co-chairs Gary Marcicano and Antonia McLemore opened the show by announcing that their goal was reached - $600,000 was raised for the DIA from both ticket sales and . the pre-show auction.

Sisters Kristin and Laurie Hart of Farmington moving through the crowd after the show, termed it, fabulous. "This was my first Fash Bash," said Laurie, pointing to Kristin, "She invited me. It was great fun. We're already planning on attending next year. Did you see the person dressed as a lettuce? And the woman dressed as a sandwich? It's a fantastic show inside the theater and out.".

The boys of summer: The Greg Norman collection at Hudson's offers golfers a new look and an attitude to match. It's a far cry from those traditional plaid slacks and "ugly golf shirts."

Artists work with nature to create art

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN

rtists Barbara Gibson, Suzanne Lifton and Barry Lehsten take nature into account when creating their innovative art works.

Gibson recycles fabric swatches, wire and gutter nails to create art dolls that seem to magically come alive through the Livonia artist's hands. Lifton and Lehsten craft decorative three-dimensional collages from natural materials such as stones, fossils, hand made paper, and fibers in their Farmington Hills studio called Visionality Designs.

Gibson, Lifton and Lehsten will exhibit their works along with more than 200 other artists at the Novi Art Festival, Aug. 9-10.

"There will be something for everyone from painting to fiber wall sculpture, acrylic sculpture. pottery, raku, 3-D glass, jewelry, rugs, and fine furniture," said Shari Miller, public relations coordinator for the show produced by Howard Alan Events. "All of the artists will be on hand because people will see art that's never been seen before and might want to ask questions."

Gibson's imaginative creatures opened her artist's mind to new ideas and techniques after 30 years of manipulating clay, though the doll's ceramic faces bear remnants of her past. Gibson began producing functional and sculptural clay works after earning a master of fine arts degree from the University of Michigan. At one point in her art career, she was exhibiting at 70 shows a year including the Ann Arbor Art Fairs. Her son Alan continues on the traditions of Gibson's studio, and will show the abstract contemporary clay wall sculptures in Dallas, Miami, New York and two dozen other cities in 1997.

"I got bored with the clay," said Gibson. "Thirty years is too much. Clay is heavy. Today, there's so much mixed media and so much material to play with, and unlike clay, the fiber gives me almost immediate gratification."

Gibson's first dolls were faceless beings accessorized with feathers and beads from the late 1800s. The dolls were intended to prod the viewer's imagination to "see whatever they want to see."

"People were saying the doll faces were too scary on the second set of dolls so I gave them pretty faces," said Gibson.

Now, the veteran artist has problems keeping them on the

Gibson designed the dolls with a marketing edge that makes them functional as well as a work of art. Hung on a wall or free-standing, the dolls do dual duty as a jewelry box. The arms cradle necklaces and gutter nails secure bracelets. Wire curled about the arms is perfect for assuring both earrings remain in the same place.

Gibson purchases the recycled materials at The Scrap Box in Ann Arbor. An ever changing stock of resources keeps the work fresh because materials such as comput-

Art buyers have been slow to accept some of the recycled materials such as the gutter nails incorporated in the dolls. Gibson believes that eventually the doll's environment-conserving elements will prove a winner.

"If you want to stay on the streets you have to listen to what people say, but it's the artists who train the public to what's acceptable as art," said Gibson.

This may be one of the last chances to purchase Gibson's art dolls. Gibson recently completed recording the CD "Time Traveler," which features a collection of songs Gibson wrote with Charlie Huhn of Humble Pie. She plans, as soon as finances permit, to reduce the amount of time spent on dollmaking to pursue music full-time. Until then, her work remains on exhibit at Galerie Internationale

Art of the Earth

Due to the nature of the materials, Lifton's and Lehsten's collage takes on an earth tone palette that is popular with home and business owners. The artsy duo tailors custom designs specifically to environments.

"The color comes from polished stones like hematite and crystal quartz," said Lehsten. "People like the depth of them and the natural-

Lifton and Lehsten are basically self-taught artists, their skills honed over the years they've manipulated papers and fibers, and developed presentation and matting techniques. Lifton has a degree is in sociology and child development, Lehsten earned degrees in law, counseling psychology and advertising. That's probably the reason behind quotations ("you can't step twice into the same river" by Herocletus) incorporated into some of the pieces.

Stan Megdall uses natural materials in a different manner. The West Bloomfield artist blows molten glass into sculptural forms and large bowls. Megdall's style is distinguished by his technique of layering color and form. Megdall, a graduate of Center for Creative Studies, taught glass blowing at the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association for several years. His work is in the collection of the Corning Museum of Glass in New Kathy Phillips brushes nature into watercolors. The translucent scenes feature stylized, somewhat whimsical figures developed during the West Bloomfield artist's 20 years as a painter. Fair-goers may be familiar with Phillips work from summer art shows such as the Detroit Festival of the Arts in downtown Detroit and Art in the Park in Plymouth.

"The landscapes and seascapes look like nice places to be," said Phillips. "Some of paintings have people in the rain, down hill skiers, skaters and ice fishermen."

Other local artists exhibiting in the festival are Kimberly Carmichael of Bloomfield Hills, painting; Ted and Andrea Striewski, Farmington Hills, jewelry and mixed media; Martha Miller, Commerce Township, watercolor, and Bill Thelen and Laurie Fowler, Northville, fiber wall sculptures.

Students in Schoolcraft College's Chamber Music and Piano Concerto Performance program were hard at work practicing for a series of upcoming concerts.

Many of the young pianists recently returned from the St. Petersburg Conservatory where they participated in an intensive three-week piano program with students from across the country.

Donald Morelock, director of Schoolcraft College's piano and applied music department, led the contingent of seven students to Russia. The program, for which Morelock directs performance study, was sponsored by Schoolcraft College and the International Fine Arts Institute in Wisconsin.

"It was exciting because we'd been there before," said Morelock. "We knew the faculty and were more comfortable with the situation to ask about technique and the Russian sound. The teachers treated the students like professionals. In Russia, there's great pride in being a classical pianist. They major in piano and music early. The teachers explained their secrets, how they developed their technique, how to develop the Russian sound."

The DIA instituted a onetime-only program in order to manage the crowd of 250,000 visitors expected to attend the exhibit. Special Egypt volunteers work one three-hour shift and, unlike Gallery Service volunteers, need not belong to the Founders Society, although membership is encouraged. Volunteers completing one shift receive a 2-for-1 voucher for exhibition tickets.

"We give an orientation to all the volunteers, ask them to smile and, because people, particularly children, like to touch, we ask the volunteers to remind visitors not to," said Farabaugh. "The most difficult part for volunteers is being on their feet for the entire shift."

The shift went smoothly for the Friends volunteers, allowing them plenty of time to view the objects. An artist asked Lee Alanskas if he could sketch some of the art works. She, in turn, asked the security guard, who said no. Sketching and photographing is allowed only with prior permission.

Jan Bennett's only question while serving as a hostess was where are the bathrooms? Bennett didn't know, but not to worry. Special Egypt volunteers carry maps to guide visitors to their destination.

The DIA is the only venue for "Splendors of Ancient Egypt" in the Midwest. The exhibition features 200 masterpieces from the pre-dynastic period to seventh century A.D. The artifacts were drawn from the Roemer-Pelizaeus Museum Hildesheim, Germany and create a panoramic view of the pharaohs, political unrest, technical achievements, and Egyptians belief in an afterlife.

Exhibition hours are 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday through Friday, until 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. All tickets specify a date and time of admission. Tickets are $10 adults, $5 childreh ages 5-12, no ticket required for children age 4 and

DIA Founders Society members are admitted free. Tickets are available through Ticketmaster and the DIA box office at (313) 833-4005. Tickets for groups of 15 or more, and school tours, are available by calling $(313)\,833-7416.$

"One of the most interesting things about the exhibit is the history and how we can learn about it," said Farabaugh. "This is a good way to teach children. There are drop-in workshops where you can learn all kinds of wonderful crafts, and it's all hands.on."

Doris Laird served in the gallery where miniature models of Egyptians convey the daily routine. The models were placed into tombs.

"This was 2,000 years before Christ, and they were already plowing with oxen and making beer; such ingenuity," said Laird.

When asked their favorite part of the exhibit, the reply was unanimous: the mummies.

"Mummies have always fascinated me," said Farabaugh: "There's an unwrapped mummy. It was interesting to see the tiny finest chamber music programs for pre-college piano students in the United States. Unlike many summer music schools for young pianists, students learn and perform concertos accompanied by a professional chamber orchestra. This year, the Ambassador. Outstanding young pianist Sanjay Mody of Birmingham was one of the students polishing his performing skills under the direction of Schoolcraft faculweek. Mody took part in both the Schoolcraft and Russian piano studies. On Wednesday, Aug. 6. the 11 year-old will perform several classical works perfected in the intensive St. Petersburg Conservatory study program including sonatas by Beethoven and Scarlatti, a Mozart concerto and Waltz in A Flat Major by Coloratura soprano Penny Kindraka and mezzo soprano Susan Stott will join Sanjay for selections by Vivaldi and Respighi,

"I liked working with the string quartet because it seems more exciting when you hear all of the instruments," said Mody referring to the two-week Schoolcraft program,

Mody has studied piano for five years, the last two years ty member Eugene Bossart last with Morelock. During his two trips to Russia. Mody studied privately with Tatiana Zagorovskava, professor of piano at St. Petersburg Conservatory.

"The second time proved a lot better for the musicality of my playing, the sound and quality,' said Mody. "I was playing the Beethoven concerto quietly and the teacher told me to bring out the arpeggio. Now that I'm home, I'll try to put that into my playing.'

Most of Russia's leading composers, musicians, painters, and writers lived in St. Petersburg. The St. Petersburg Conservatory, one of the oldest in Europe, was founded in 1862 by Anton Rubenstein. Glinka, Rimsky-Korsakov, Tchaikovsky, Prokofief, and Shostaskovitch all studied or taught at the conservatory. The spirits of these composers made quite an impression on Mody, Brian Rodriguez and Joseph Heremans when they performed in the St. Petersburg Conservatory Recital Hall and the palaces of Nevesky and Sher-

"Walking the same floor as Tchaikovsky, I felt like picking up a tile and bringing it home," said Mody.

The fact that this was Brian Rodriguez's first trip to Russia deeply affected the 20-year-old pianist. Rodriguez, a Northville resident, recently completed his freshman year as a music major at Schooleraft College.

"I learned a lot because it's a different culture and country so what I learned stuck with me," said Rodriguez. "All of the history there is really interesting and I was impressed by their appreciation for classical music.'

Troy pianist Joseph Heremans appreciated learning Russian technique. This was the 15-yearold Country Day School students second trip to the St. Petersburg Conservatory. "I went back and saw a different approach to the music," said Heremans. "I also like St. Petersburg, the monuments and buildings.

Sanjay's mother Julie Mody chaperoned the students. She admires the Russian teachers because "they treated young students like Sanjay as an artist." "They have a reverence for music as art," said Julie Mody added, "The Russians revere classical music. As far as Sanjay, I saw what the Russian studies did for him, opening him up to a different culture and historical perspective. It gives students a bigger sense of things and broadens their goals."

Tracy Kwang, a 13-year-old Novi Middle School student, was vacationing when the other students went to Russia, but did attend the summer Chamber Music and Piano Concerto Performance program at Schoolcraft College. Kwang won first place in Michigan Music Teachers Association concerto competition last year.

"It's a really good experience to play with an orchestra," said Kwang. "I was also in camp last year and thought it was very Julie Mody hopes the community will take advantage of the free concerts by Schoolcraft Chamber Music and Piano Concerto Performance students Aug. 6-8. According to Morelock, the concerts are the initial step to instituting a summer music festival next year.

"It's a chance to show support for talented young students and enjoy an evening of fine classical music," said Julie Mody.

The real Scopes trial

Summer for the Gods: The Scopes Trial and America's Continuing Debate Over Science and Religion By Edward J. Larson (BasicBooks, $25)

BY HUGH GALLAGHER STAFF WRITER

Edward J. Larson wants to set the record straight with this new book on the famous Scopes trial and separate fact from myth. He does a good job in a book that should be well-received by most people on both sides of the creationism-evolution issue. The 1925 Scopes trial set the forces of modern science against fundamentalist Christian religion. Teacher John Scopes was charged with violating Tennessee state law by teaching. Darwin's theory of evolution. His case drew national attention when three-time presidential candidate William Jennings Bryan (for the prosecution) and noted trial lawyer Clarence Darrow (for the defense) offered their services. The stage was set for what became the first "Trial of the Century." Most of us know about the Scopes trial from the play "Inherit the Wind" by Jerome Layrence and Robert E. Lee and the popular movie version by Stanley Kramer, featuring electric performances by Fredric March and Spencer Tracy.

Larson argues that the play and movie seriously distort history and are especially unfair in their presentation of the antievolution side. He carefully retells the story of the trial, profiles the major players and cogently discusses the issues. His presentation is laudably even-handed and wellresearched. Even when discussing "Inherit the Wind," Larson is careful to say that Lawrence and Lee used the trial to attack McCarthyism in the 1950s and were explicit that their version of what happened was not historically accurate (they even changed the names of everyone involved).

What were the facts? First, Scopes was not the victim of a small, bigoted Southern backwater. The leaders of Dayton, Tenn., actually talked Scopes into being a test defendant for the ACLU, who wanted to challenge the Tennessee law in court. The Dayton burgers had dreams of making a name for the town and being the center of media attention (radio was coming into its own and newspapers were at their peak of influence and popularity). H. L. Mencken and other noted journalists play a major role in this story. Second, and most crucially, William Jennings Bryan was not a small-minded, right-wing bigot. He was that rarest of things, a political populist/liberal and a religious conservative (think Jimmy Carter). Bryan had long been the spokesman for the common man against the powers of economic privilege and, as Wilson's secretary of state, he had been an anti-war advocate. Even on the issue at hand he was against imposing a penalty and based his argument on majoritarian principles, that is that the citizens of Tennessee had a right to decide on the curriculum for the schools they supported.

Once Bryan and Darrow became involved, the ACLU's simple test case, which they hoped to take to the Supreme Court, became instead a contest between two "forces of nature" with decidedly different views of the world. Ironically, though, Darrow had supported Bryan's presidential aspirations and shared many of his early political views. But Darrow was an agnostic, verging toward atheist. He even differed from others in the defense in his view of Darwin and the evolution theory. The defense officially argued that Darwin did not present a problem for Christian believers.

Bryan was a Christian fundamentalist, though a member of the mainstream Presbyterian church.

The trial reached its apex in the scene that is also central to "Inherit the Wind." Darrow called Bryan to the stand as an expert on the Bible. This resulted in a grilling that made Bryan look foolish. Scopes was convicted, but many felt the defense had actually won in the court of popular opinion. Larson argues that the result was more complicated than that. He shows that many of the arguments used to defend Scopes have come back to be used in favor of teaching "creation science." He also argues that fundamentalism did not wither and go away because of the Scopes trial, despite the fervent wishes of political liberals.

The Scopes trial was primarily a debate about the nature of democracy - Bryan's majoritarian views versus protecting the rights of individuals in a democratic society and a debate about the differences between science and religion and government's role in dealing with both.

This is a short, well-written, even-handed and provocative

Comic Carrot Top makes 'show and tell' pay off big

By CHRISTINA FUOCO STAFF WRITER

Carrot Top is up to his old

Phoning from his Orlando, Fla., home at 9:30 a.m., the flame-haired comedian warns that the call may soon be cut off.

"I'm standing in the middle of the pool, with my cordless phone in my hand during a thunderstorm. So I might not be with you that long," said Carrot Top, a.k.a. Scott Thompson, bursting into laughter.

"No, I'm just kidding." Carrot Top has made a living out of playing "show and tell' using props as his jokes - a boot with a kickstand for drunken cowboys, high heels with training wheels, and a fire hydrant with handles for disabled dogs. At shows, he frantically digs through his toy box like a fickle 2 1/2-year-old trying to decide which toy to play with. He will bring his collection of toys to Meadow Brook Music Festival in Rochester on Wednesday, Aug. 13. Always keeping up with current events, Carrot Top said some of his latest inventions include protection for boxers fighting against Mike Tyson.

"My light show and stuff has changed too," Carrot Top said comparing this show to his gig a couple years ago at the State Theatre in Detroit. "There's lights, lasers and pyrotechnics. It'll be even cooler than last time. It's a little more rock 'n'

Coming to town: Comedian Carrot Top brings his box of tricks to Meadow Brooks Music Festival on Wednesday, Aug. 13.

This fall, Carrot Top expands his talents in the movie "Chairman of the Board" due in movie houses Friday, Oct. 24.

"I'm this wacked-out inventor kind of like my live show. I'm looking for a job and I see Jack Warden's car is broken down on the side of the road. I offer to help him and we go surfing together. He's a surfer and he owns this company like Sharper Warden's character dies and leaves the company to Carrot. Miller.

Top, much to the chagrin of Warden's nephew, played by Larry "Of course, he's out to get me the whole movie but I'm one of those guys whom everybody loves. I'm the young, fun kid who brings youth and excitement to the company."

The movie also stars Courtney Thorne-Smith of "Melrose Place" as Carrot Top's love interest, Raquel Welch, and Louis Anderson.

"It's cute," he said of the movie. "I think it's fun. It's very energetic."

Filming a movie, Carrot Top explained, was much different than preparing for his live act.

"The stand-up I've done for so long that I don't need to prepare. I'm just going up there and being out of control. The movie was a totally different experience. I had written words that I had to say and there's no reaction. There's no reaction whatsoever. You don't know if it was a funny take because everybody has to be quiet (on the set.) You have to have your self confidence up. You have to do your thing and hope what you did was funny." Carrot Top hopes to use the movie as a vehicle to bolster his success as a stand-up comedian.

"I don't care about being a star necessarily. I just want people to come to my shows. That's my passion. I love to do the stand-ore than 500 top-rated archers from the United States — including Olympic Gold Medalists and 17 countries around the world are calling Canton's, Heritage Park, home this week for the 113th Annual National Target Championships.

Competition runs from 9:00 a.m. - 4:00 p.m. Aug. 2-8 in the park, off Canton Center Road at Proctor. Admission and parking are free.

There are men's, women's, youth, master and seniors divisions. Archers compete individually and as teams. An "Olympic" round featuring the top 64 competitors in all divisions will begin at 9:00 a.m. Friday.

Spectators will be treated to the unusual sight of 70 or 80 archers lined up releasing their arrows towards targets marked by red, blue, black, white and gold concentric circles and then hear the "thump" as their arrows land. The archers are required to wear "uniforms" that include 50-percent white material for dramatic contrast.

The competitors will include 25 archers who competed in the 1996 Summer Olympics in Atlanta, eight of whom won medals. The Olympic contingent is headlined by the United States' gold medal men's team of Justin Huish, Richard "Butch" Johnson and Rod White. Huish also took the individual gold medal in Atlanta.

The United States Men's Archery Team recently returned from Russia, where they won the gold medal at the Moscow Grand Prix Archery Tournament in Moscow.

BOOKS

Loren Estleman has an eye for gritty frontiers

BY FRANK PROVENZANO STAFF WRITER

A pistol conveniently lies an arm's length from where author Loren D. Estleman pounds away at a manual typewriter held together with "paper clips and spit." As his many crime novels have revealed, there's a fine line between inspiration and desperation.

With a prolific output of 40 mystery and western novels in the last 21 years, Estleman of Whitmore Lake doesn't have time for the latter.

In his mid 40s, Estleman has stared down any semblance of a midlife crisis with the simultaneous release of two new books: "Never Street" and "Billy Gashade."

A crime-mystery novel, "Never Street" resurrects Estleman's most popular character, privateeye Amos Walker, after a sevenyear publishing absence. "Never Street" finds Walker hunting for a missing film noir buff, who, it seems, has fallen into a 1940s potboiler classic.

In the tradition of Raymond Chandler's Philip Marlow and Dashiell Hammett's Sam Spade, Walker is Estleman's self-confessed alter ego: a cool, witty and rugged Detroit private investigator who prowls about in Bloomingham, a locale that resembles Birmingham and Bloomfield Hills.

Like Walker, Estleman detests phoniness and occasionally reveals a tender teddy bear interior. "He's someone I'd like to be," said Estleman. "He delivers the right line on the spot whereas I think of the line on the elevator on the way down."

In contrast to the contemporary setting of "Never Street," Estleman's "Billy Gashade" reflects the author's uncanny ability to recreate the milieu of the wild frontier right down to the most minute dusty, tumble-

New novels by Loren D. Estleman ■ "Never Street," an Amos

Walker mystery novel, published by Warner Books.

"Billy Gashade: An American Epic," a western tale about a wandering 19thcentury musician who crosses the path of legendary folk heroes, published by Tom Doherty Associates, Inc.

The western tale follows a wandering 19th-century musician who crosses the path of legendary folk heroes and villains including the James brothers, Billy the Kid, Crazy Horse and Wild Bill Hickok.

Both books are packed with Estleman's trademark breezy dialogue, high-energy plots and precision narrative pacing.

"There's not a book that I regret," said Estleman, who writes six hours a day, seven days a week with the goal of at least two finished pages each day. "Walt Whitman wrote and rewrote 'Leaves of Grass' and I don't think that the final version was that much better than what he started with."

In the last 20 years, Estleman has received numerous awards. including best private-eye novel, most notable book by The New York Times Book Review and nominations for a Pulitzer Prize and American Book Award.

Besides his Walker mystery series of novels based on Detroit history, including "Edsel," "King of the Corner," "Motown," and

"Whiskey River." Critics place Estleman among the top echelon mystery writers and have called him, "Detroit's private-eye writer," Arguably, if it wasn't for the success of crimefiction author Elmore Leonard of Birmingham, Estleman probably would be recognized as "the poet of the Motor City."

Ironically, Estleman, a former cop-beat reporter at the Ypsilanti Press, lives in the country outside of Detroit, across from an 80-acre farm in Whitmore Lake where he grew up.

Along the dirt roads of an unmarked landscape north of Ann Arbor, he works each day in a second-floor study filled with reference books and stories by his favorite authors, from Shakespeare to Chandler.

Collectively, he said, the books represent "all the knowledge of the world."

The fistful of formed metal resting alongside Estleman's stack of worn-bound first edition books, he explained, is the type of pistol used by Page Murdock, a protagonist from one of his western novels.

For anyone familiar with American literature, the mere sight of a writer and a gun together in a sequestered room conjures the ghost of Hemingway. Estleman - burly, thickmoustached with a razor wit and series, Estleman has published a piercing glare - hardly discourages the comparison. His version of the Hemingway myth, however, has a much different plot than the original.

Unlike Hemingway, whose finest work was penned early in his writing career, Estleman continues to expand as a writer while pushing the genres of crime and western fiction.

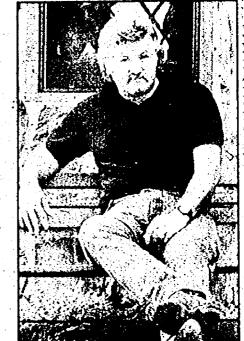

"It's more noble to knock down the fence of the genre than to be constrained by it," he said.

Few American writers have consistently shown as much dexterity in two distinct genres. Invariably searching for the proper metaphor, Estleman compares alternately working in the mystery and western form as "literary crop rotation."

Yet to some extent, Estleman is pigeonholed as a writer in the highly fragmented publishing market. He scoffs at the notion that Nicholas Evans, first-time novelist of "The Horse Whisperer," received $3 million for his book and film rights. "The sad thing about writing is that sometimes it's said that a writer's best work is his early writing," he said. "I believe my next project will be my best. Otherwise, why write?"

Hemingway's legacy

By exploring criminal intent in his novels, Estleman said he's creating a metaphor for a society where people relentlessly pursue affluence without regard to scruples or law. Regardless of wherever Americans live, he claims, crime is a "basic conflict."

Despite stark stylistic differences, Estleman's literary ancestors appear to be Dostoyevsky and Poe as much as Hammett, Chandler, Hemingway and Faulkner. A small portrait of the author of; "The Raven," along with a life-size raven sculpture, keeps Estleman company in his study.

With an upcoming Midwest book signing tour and another Amos Walker novel planned for a ; spring release, it's looking like a ! banner harvest from Estleman's latest literary crop rotation.

Seasoned traveler takes to leisurely French barge

BY HUGH GALLAGHER STAFF WRITER

Jean Long of West Bloomfield likes, to joke that she's been everywhere twice. So when she rates her recent trip to France in her personal top 10, you know it was something special.

Long, a charter member of the Nomads Club, joined other club members for a 15-day combination river barge/chateau vacation. The passengers on the Nomads' flying clubhouse split into two groups, one taking barges down the Yonne and Seine rivers, the other going to luxury chateaux and then changing places.

Long began her trip on the barge Anacoluthe in Joigny.

"The barge is a low boat, very quiet, which is the thing I enjoyed most," she said. "You move very slowly down the river."

Long and roommate Lyn Balman shared "an ample room" air-conditioned with twin beds, two desks and bed length storage drawers.

"In the head was a full stall shower with a door," Long said.

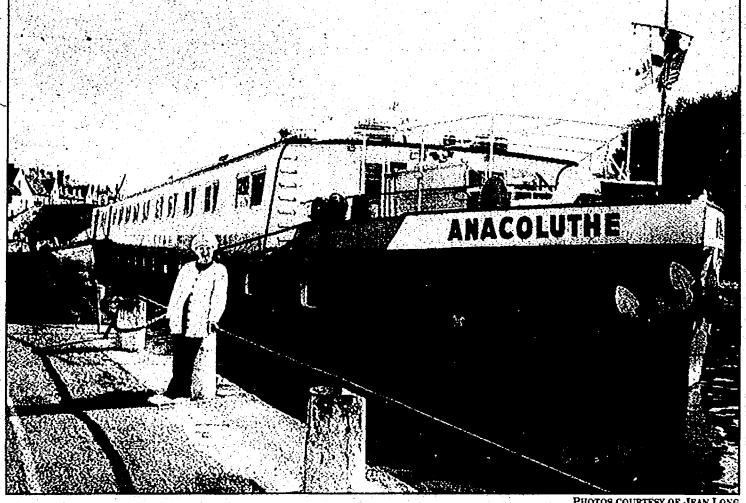

For a week, the barge made its way down the Yonne, into the Seine on its way from Joigny to Paris, traveling through 32 locks with each station having "beautiful flowers and a friendly dog."

"I liked to sit on deck, sailing along looking at France. Red poppies all along the shore symbolized the beauty of the place," Long said. "You could see the medieval towns in the distance.'

A highlight of the trip was the meals served on board, complete with an explanation by the chef.

"Ronald, our chef, would prepare and give a detailed description of each meal, with an eye for taste and presentation," Long wrote in notes she prepared to remember her trip. "Our lunches were a three course buffet. Our dinners, four course, served elegantly and were delicious from appetizer to the scrumptious desserts. One thing we found different was the salad (greens and small slices of cheese) always served after the entree."

A wine steward, Hugh, would give similar expert information on

Each morning after breakfast, Long and her companions would go on tours of the surrounding area including Auxerre, Sens, Barbizon, At Barbizon, Long bought a silk scarf with a Monet print and at Giverny, she walked through Monet's garden, the inspiration for many of his famous paintings.

"That was the best part of the trip. It was so beautiful. I can't think of the adjectives to describe the flowers," Long said.

Afternoons would often be filled with card games on deck, passengers ever mindful of approaching bridges when they would be told to duck their heads. The barge docked at night and passengers could take optional strolls through town.

Passengers could also pass up bus tours for bicycle touring as Long's roommate did in Burgundy, cycling to a palace festival.

"It was a misty morning and we probably shouldn't have gone up but they gave it to us for half price," Long said. "Pierre, my balloon pilot, looks like Mel Gibson. We had a happy landing with champagne."

The barge moved from the Yonne to the Seine as it approached Paris, the city of lights.

"We sailed past Notre Dame with all our group topside taking pictures in the beautiful Paris sunshine, under the great bridges to Dijon (one traveler said it with our guide, Severine, pointing out all points of interest," Long writes. "We all stood there in awe of the historic lives and times these landmarks had seen.

Rising NHL stars for the future

By Brad Emons Staff Writer

The scrimmages were the fun part, but the Futures '97 Camp held last week at the Compuware Arena in Plymouth Township gave potential National Hockey League players good preparation for the upcoming season.

Players found themselves constantly in a state of exhaustion, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. each day (Monday through Friday) participating in drills, weight lifting, aerobics, running and games (60 minutes running time).

It featured talent from the Ontario Hockey League, including 16 players from the home ice Plymouth Whalers; along with players from Western, American, Quebec Major Junior and East. Coast leagues - all spawing grounds for the NHL.

They came from all corners -Russia, Czechoslovakia, Medicine Hat, Erie, Sudbury, Binghamton, Seattle, Oshawa and Springfield.

The youngest was Brian Finley, a 16-year-old goaltender from Sault Ste. Marie, who is property of Barrie of the OHL. He won't be eligible for the NHL draft until 1999.

Water break: Jason Lawmaster catches his breath during Thursday's scrimmage.

The oldest was Tripp Tracy of Grosse Pointe, a goalie who played last year for Richmond of the ECHL and is property of the Carolina Hurricanes.

Many of the players were affiliated with NHL clubs including new Carolina team (formerly Hartford), the New York Rangers, Toronto, Phoenix and Vancouver.

The Futures '97 Camp drew NHL scouts, agents (such as former Red Wing goaltender Eddie Mio), trainers and coaches. Ranger Adam Graves also stopped by to take a

"We're about halfway through the summer and this is kind of a benchmark," said Plymouth Whalers coach and general manager Peter DeBoer, now in his third season. "We bring these guys in here for a week because the NHL camps are only six weeks away. For the player and the team, it's a good idea. It's a good thing for the player because a lot of scouts get a chance to see them

"As far as readiness, they're ready to step in a play once camp opens."

Whalers assistants Steve Spott and Greg Stefan (another former Wings netminder) gave players onice instruction along with Andy Weidenbach, a local skating coach.

Dave Hilger, who once worked with the U.S. Olympic weightlifting team, also lent his expertise.

"By the end of the day these guys are so tired, they really don't want to do anything but get back to their rooms (at the Quality Inn)," DeBord said. "We're going to take them to a Tigers-Blue Jays game.

"There's a lot of conditioning, and Dave (Hilger) doesn't understand the word 'fatigue. "But they do a lot of skill work and they scrimmage. They do a little bit of everything."

The Futures '97 Camp may benefit two local Whaler players the most.

Novi's Kevin Holdridge, a 6-foot-2, 204-pound defenseman who will be a junior this fall at Redford Catholic Central High School, played 55 games last year with the Whalers.

The 16-year-old is eligible for the 1998 NHL draft and could be a late first-rounder.

"The scouts are excited about him because he has lots of potential." DeBoer said. "Kevin was one of the youngest in our league. He's a great physical specimen, a defensive defenseman with good hands. There are a lot of comparisons to the

Another Whaler eligible for the draft next year is 18-year-old defenseman Jason Lawmaster, who recently graduated from Westland John Glenn High School.

Lawmaster, a tough 5-11, 204pounder, played 29 games with the Whalers last year after spending the Hope, Ontario, a Tier II team in the Toronto Metro Junior loop.

"Jason was a free agent last year and we were fortunate to get him," DeBoer said of Lawmaster. "He's a guy the scouts haven't seen very much. Last year with us he had to start from scratch and how high he goes (in the draft) depends on what type of season he has with us next

"He's big and physical and he likes to stir is up. He has a real presence out on the ice and we look for big things from him."

Holdridge does not concern himself about a possible NHL future. He simply wants to get into the best shape possible for the Whalers camp, which begins Aug. 27.

"I'm just going to try to play better than last year and then see what happens," he said. "You need some place to develop as quickly as possible and this makes the development process quicker.

"You see what you have to do to get to the next level. You learn first half of the season with Port about new ways to work out in the weight room. We've learned a lot of new lifting techniques."

Holdridge is passing up an opportunity to play collegiate hockey (he forfeited his NCAA eligibility when he signed with the Whalers). He believes the OHL is a more direct

4-time champ eludes Livonia, 5-4

The Bayside Yankees, four-time defending National Amateur Baseball Federation 15-16 year-old World Series champions, found a way to escape Livonia Travel in an opening round game played Thursday at Madonna University Park, 5-4.

The metropolitan New York program, which has produced 15 professional players and surpassed the $6 million mark in college scholarship help (since 1982), didn't do anything to disprove it was the odds-on tourney favorite once again to win the eight-team tournament.

"Livonia has an outstanding team and they hit the ball," Bayside manager Ron Seltzer said. "And they don't quit. They have good pitching and good defense. We were lucky to

Vincent Santo's grand slam homer in the second inning off Livonia Travel starter Eric Sams proved to be the big blow. (Richard Conte added an RBI sacrifice fly in the third to give Bayside a 5-0 cushion.)

The base-clearing slam came with two out, ironically after Sams had issued walks to Bayside's eighth and ninth hitters.

"Bayside has a nice ballclub," Livonia Travel manager Bill Rabe said. "We had a few walks that hurt us. You can't walk the eighth and ninth guys with two outs. You have to get those guys.

"Defense usually hasn't been our specialty this year," said Seltzer, who had 850 kids try out for his team this year. "But we made some nice plays in the field and that's what won the ballgame for us."

Late pullout puts GC in a jam school year, Bob Eisiminger lobbied to keep his Garden City football team in the Mega-Conference White Division.

So the Cougars accomplished something despite a 1-8 record in '96.

Since we're using past performance as criteria, what Eisiminger pulled recently on the players and adminstration at Garden City gives him Bush League status:

Eisiminger, outspoken over the years about his dislike for private schools, leaves Observerland and still can't avoid his beloved Shamrocks. At least there's no mystery to CC's offense.

Leaving weeks before the eason to take another head coaching job at a more prominent program is one thing.

Conditioning drills are sunposed to start Monday. Who's going to lead the players manager Ron McKellor?

No one questions his loyalty. Remarkably, Eisiminger has left open the possibility of returning as the Cougars' baseball coach, which he has held five years. Garden City athletic director Bob Dropp can't possibly be as optimistic.

The Garden City football program will recover but the timing couldn't be worse.

PR problems

Eisiminger sorely lacked in the public relations department with the Observer and reportedly with the Garden City Booster Club.

When Eisiminger hosted a BLESTO college tryout camp at Garden City in the spring of 1994, he had an odd way of seeking publicity. Instead of alerting newspapers first, he started calling every high school in the metro area.

What's a newspaper for?

One source said he "alienated both" the Observer and the Booster Club.

He's refused to talk to me since the spring of 1996 because he says I'm too negative, but he has rarely called one of my colleagues since to report one of his baseball scores. He rarely called before. for that matter.

We got his football scores from team statistician extraordinaire Marshall Henry.

All community sports editors ask for is cooperation from coaches. We can't be at all the events, so often times we rely on their calls.

Most of the stories on his teams, those that could be gathered, stressed the positive. and coaches have been around since newspapers and sports began to co-exist, but having the Booster Club against you is akin to having your mother cheer for the other team. Word is the Booster Club will throw a party and it won't be called "We Believe in Bob."

Jet Box: Age no barrier

BY STEVE KOWALSKI STAFF WRITER

The Livonia Decision Consultants, Inc. batter hits a hard ground ball to the second baseman who lunges to his left and makes a nifty throw to first base for the out.

"Who is that out there?" asks the DCI player as he heads back to the dugout at Windsor's Mic-Mac Park, "Roberto Alomar?"

No. it's 31-year-old Gary Alatchaniana, a member of the Troy Jet Box Class A unlimited age team that plays in the Adray Metro Baseball Association.

Alatchaniana, who played at Bloomfield Hills Andover and the University of Arizona, would be nappy just drawing comparisons to his counterparts at DCI, who are 19 or 20 years old. Mentioning his name in the same breath as Alomar, the Cleveland Indians second baseman, might be dangerous.

After all, wasn't Alatchaniana's baseball career supposed to be over by now? Slow pitch softball games aren't for these guys. "You take them for granted because they're older, but they can, stick the ball-and play defense," said Pete Quinn, å Redford Thurston graduate who plays for DCI and Madonna University.

The Adray Metro Baseball Association just finished its: first season. It has four collegiate aged teams (DCI, Livonia Adray, Michigann Lake Area Rams and Hines Park Lincoln Mercury) and four Class A teams (Downgiver Adray, Windsor Selects, Windsor Stars and Jet Box).

Jet Box plays most of its home games away, really, at Mic-Mac Park Remarkably, there are no fields in Oakland County able to host Jet Box games.

Bill Ryan and his wife Millie, directors of the Windsor Athletic Association, are just happy to have teams playing at their once-proud complex:

Crowds of 1,000 used to watch these games, but tonight's crowd can be counted on both hands.

That damn casino doesn't neip as any, Bill Ryan said. "Eyeryons throws their money out after there and I haven't even been in the place."

Young at heart

Jet Box's average age is about 28 but it goes up considerably when coach Jim Corte is forced into action.

Corte, 50, had to play right fie,d a few weeks back when only eight Jet Box players showed up to play Livonia Adray, a collegiate team.

Adray coach John Moraitis insisted on the game being played instead of postponed due to threatening weather. He probably should have volunteered to play to even up the sides.

Corte was a good sport, too, giving up his chance to bat in the No. 9 spot in the order:

Bat speed: Catcher Dave Jennings, who played at Livonia Bentley, takes a cut for Troy Jet Box, a Class A team.

Well, turns out that was more for health reasons, not because he wanted to take it easy on Adray.

"This is a young man's game," said Corte, knowing any move out of the ordinary might send him off on a stretcher. "If you can't bend, stretch or run, you can't play.'

Corte has won almost 900 games in a 29-year coaching career. Two of his teams were National Amateur Baseball Federation national runners-up.

Corte gave up his title as player/coach years ago. He was considered old back in 1975, the last time he hit a home run in an organized baseball game against coach Frank Corey's summerleague team at Detroit Catholic Central.

"I remember the centerfielder saying 'Throw it in there, this guy can't hit,' " said Corte, a sales manager for Jet Box. "The next pitch I hit over his head."

Corte is so old he coached Rick Berryman, who doubles as both the Redford Union High School and Rams' coach.

Corte feels lucky that he can even get a team like this together. Some of his more famous alumni, after Berryman of course, are former Tigers' Dave Rozema and Milt Wilcox, who weren't quite ready to give up the game after retiring from the Tigers.

"One out of 10,000 men play hard ball after high school,' Corte said. "It's got to be worse than this.

Corte has embraced everything about the game but chewing tabacco.

"The only time I chewed was 1960 at Briggs Stadium when I was the bat boy (for the Pan American Games)," Corte said. "I turned yellow, green, purple that was the last time I chewed. My great memory is enhanced with beers."

Not washed-up yet

Corte's catcher is Dave Jennings, the 1985 Livonia Bentley graduate who played and later coached at Wayne State Univer-

Jennings is only 30, but he probably has 40 year old legs, doing all that bending behind the plate over the years. He's a supervisor at Clark Petroleum.

The shortstop is Rick Tayormina, the former Westland John Glenn and U-D product who has played eight seasons for Corte. He wasn't there on this night as he couldn't get away quick enough from work at Accurate Tape and Label in Livonia.

Playing shortstop was Tom Dimambro, 31, a General Motors engineer versatile player from East Detroit and U-D.

The pitcher was Bob Dell, a Northwood University product, whose right arm pales in comparison to what he normally carries around as an armed Internal Revenue Service whorker.

One of Corte's oldest players is 37-year-old pitcher Mark Jacob, a former University of Detroit-Mercy standout who also played in the Detroit Tigers organiza-

He reached the Double-A level for the Birmingham Barons, the team Michael Jordan played for when he was trying his hand as a baseball player in the Chicago White Sox organization.

Jacob's claim to fame may be telling people he pitched ahead of Orel Hershiser in the starting lineup of the Detroiit Adray baseball team, the All-American Amateur Baseball Association national champion coached by Bob Atkins. Hershiser now pitches for the Cleveland Indians after several years with the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"Orel was the fifth starter and I love telling people that because I'm a fan of his now," said Jacob, director of sales for Central Transport.

Jet Box finished in third place in the Adray Division of the Adray Metro Baseball Association with a 14-12-0 record. It season isn't over as the North American Baseball Federation regional at U-D Mercy and Northwestern Field in Detroit.

Jet Box finished fourth in the nation last year and intends to contend again.

Corte is a big reason for Jet Box's success.

"If you show up, he'll play you," said Alatchaniana, a financial planner at Dean Whitter in Livonia. "I played against him for years with my buddies.

"We were always arguing about 'Who's batting third, screw you, I'm coaching today.' "I'm glad I joined Jim's team. It's a fun group. Come the end of the year, at the regional, we take care of business."

My dad showed me the difference between collecting coins and saving money.

When I was a kid, I thought he'd been collecting U.S. Savings Bonds. Until he said that his "collection" was for my college education and his retirement. Then I realized that he wasn't just "collecting" but "saving" to help insure our future. He told me that Savings Bonds are backed by the full faith and credit of the United States, so they're secure. They carn interest for up to 30 years. And their value is guaranteed to grow at market-based rates. That's insuring the future.

So I guess that's why I started "collecting" U.S. Savings Bonds, too.

Ask your employer or banker about saving with U.S. Savings Bonds. For all the right reasons.

Strike 10 markets new game

The sport of bowling is taking on a whole new image.

It may not be noticed immediately, but the "die is cast" in the form of a totally new marketing organization known as

Strike Ten. A few years ago the bowling industry decided to consolidate the promotional efforts into one compact and efficient program which was first organized as Bowling, Inc. The idea took off so well that a special promotional and services branch was formedm thus becoming Strike Ten.

Stephen M. Ryan, Jr. was selected and hired for the new venture as chief executive officer. Ryan was previously the president and CEO of Pittsburgh Sports Holdings Co., which includes the Pittsburgh Penguins of the NHL.

On Nov. 25, 1996, Ryan took the helm of Strike Ten Entertainment. His mission: To orchestrate all marketing activities for the sport on behalf of Bowling, Inc. "Meeting with leaders of the sport has convinced me there is an exciting chance to move an entire industry into the 21st century," said Ryan.

Now, only a few months later, it is evident that the new enterprise is beginning to strike into action. Some long term relationships have already been started with several brand names.

America's bowlers will soon be able to master the possibilities of added purchasing power with the MasterCard Strike Ten Affinity Card with a host of benefits and services including Southwest Airlines, Online Services, no annual fee, 5.9 percent introductory APR, travel insurance, auto rentalinsurance and more.

There's additional incentive to join ABC or WIBC with the "Xcellence Program" to add value for the members.

Strike Ten will bond with bowlers other outside interests such as in-line skating or skakeboards, NASCAR, family interests and others based on demographics. AMF has committed for long ing "U.S. Open," with a three year $1.5 million sponsorship. Another area of activity is collegiate bowling, which Ryan considterm sponsorship of the Pro Bowlers a "diamond in the rough," ready to be shaped and polished. "There's a lot of passion, pride and energy on the collegiate level, from the students to the coaches," he said. "We're going to elevate this diamond in the rough to a new level and help shape the future of intercollegiate bowling."

Anheuser-Busch has signed on for a multi-year marketing partnership in what is believed to be the most extensive corporate sponsorship commitment ever secured for the bowling industry.

It's a three year multi-million dollar partnership agreement beginning with promotions, including a bowling pin-shaped bottle of Bud designed to drive traffic into bowling centers and promote league participation.

Deep Blue will be entering the ABC Masters next year, as Strike Ten Entertainment is working with IBM to create a new comprehensive web site - BOWL.COM.

The site, which will be informative, entertaining and interactive, is scheduled to be launched for the 1997-98 season.

Tournament results, membership and educational seminar signups, and publications will be among the varied content on the Users will be able to order merchandise on-line. All bowlers can also make a fashion statement, with some distinctive designs.

Strike Ten is developing an extensive line of soft goods merchandise for sale in bowling centers nationwide. Brunswick is now committed to $1 million in promotional support aimed basically at international competition such as FIQ and the Olympic Games, hoping for medal status by the 2004

There have already been a number of special promotions including heavyweight boxing champion Evander Holyfield, who can be often found on the lanes when he's not training.

NBC featured Holyfield and his kids on TV, which aired in May.

LBPT bowler Lisa Wagner will be bowling this month at Rockerfeller Center in N.Y. with specially set up lanes by AMF, it will be aired on NBC's Weekend Today show. It looks very much that Steve Ryan has the ability to take this sport of bowling to another level, and we will all benefit in the long run.

Gary Dunn has written a book that should help you identify what you have seen or been bothered by.

For those who want to explore a particular group of insects in more detail, Dunn has provided references from the scientific literature.

Arbor Woods presents 2 floor plan choices

Reservations are coming in at Arbor Woods, an attached condominium community which backs up to Hines Park in Livo-

Only 18 units will arise off Ann Arbor Trail between Wayne and Newburgh roads.

"This is small, private," said Larry Henney, a Realtor with RE/MAX Great Lakes and onsite sales representative. "There's only one way in and out. You have woods, the park bordering one side."

The four-acre parcel fit the bill for Villa Construction, which was looking to production build. Brothers Gino and Franco Silvestri have specialized in houses on scattered lots in the $150,000 to $300,000 range.

"It was a nice, clean site," Gino said. "You've got Westland Mall real close by, Livonia schools, conveniences. You have Hines Park here. (I)-96 is right there, too."

Two floor plans are available a colonial of 1,600 square feet with two bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths and a ranch of 1,350 square feet with two bedrooms and two baths. Each carries a base price of $159,900. Both include at standard price fireplace, first-floor laundry, basement, dishwasher, two-car garage, energy-efficient furnace and carpeting.

Two skylights are included in the ranch, one in the colonial. Carpeting is included.

"We're trying to build ... to give as much extra features for the person they don't have to pay for up front," Gino said. "Skylights, high efficiency windows, a good layout, Tyvek wrap (insulation)." The colonial features a great room, kitchen/nook and half bath on the main floor, two bedrooms and two full baths upstairs. The master contains a combination tub/shower and walk-in closet.

"We tried to make an open staircase," Gino said. A planter shelf is halfway up the steps. The basement steps are well placed directly off the garage and laundry room.

The ranch features a larger great room, 22-by-15 feet, kitchen/nook, a master with combination tub/shower and walk-in closet, a second full hall bath and a room that can be used either as a second bedroom or a study.

All rooms in the ranch will have pitched ceilings to enhance volume space and promote an open appearance.

The eight units that back up to Hines Park will have walk-out basements and carry a premium of $25,000.

Exterior materials are brick and an aggregate wood/concrete

Building a new home is a constant battle

Some readers have asked me to follow a project from the beginning to illustrate the entire process with its inherent ups and downs.

thought it was a great idea, so in addition to discussing a series of everchanging topics related to architecture and construction, we will follow the design and construction of a "custom" home that is being built through my office. Five months ago I began reporting on the progress of this project, and I will continue to have monthly updates as the project progresses.

Summer has reached its what this is all about.

peak here or so it seems. The demands being placed upon the sub-contractors is immense, and some of the subcontractors have overbooked themselves to make up for losses during other times of the year.

Earlier articles dealt with problems associated with the masons, and these problems persist. The masons on this project are reasonably skillful but do not appear on the job as frequently as I think they should because they are juggling too many jobs at once.

Let's face it: the work of a mason is tough, hard work, and it never gets easier - it is repetitive and often times dull. Lift up a 12-inch block a few times and imagine doing that all day long in the sun with temperatures in the 90s. Then you might come to understand masons on this crew smoke heavily and drinks beer at lunch time. But all I can concern myself with issues regarding the project (dimensions and details) and their inability to meet deadlines.

While it appears that I have been overly giving, i.e. allowing them as much time as they need to finish, I have gotten other bids to complete their work, and it is just now that it may make sense to remove these guys before they jeopardize my carpenter's schedule. They were cheap enough that it paid to allow them the time they needed as long as no other damages were incurred in the subcontractor to a high-end general contractor in Oakland County. Of late, the large general contractor is busy and has forced the mason to leave my project site to complete that company's work. A general contractor with repeat work has leverage over a subcontractor, and when that company says , jump to one of their subs, the sub can only ask "how high?"

Unprofessional? You bet, but is it practiced regularly? I would imagine so, but it is still inexcusable. The basic professional rule is that a project under construction has the "right of way" over a project that is not in construction.

Only after careful consideration should one take action on the job site. If, however, the problem involves the health and safety of those involved with the project, one must take immediate action to solve such problems before something unwanted occurs.

Good luck and do not forget to hire a good professional.

Electricity's place in your home

By Reader's Digest Books For AP Special Features

The flow of electricity through a wire is often compared to the flow of water through a pipe.

Electricity is basically the flow of subatomic particles called electrons through a conductor, a metal such as copper wire whose resistance to electrical flow - measured in units called ohms - is low. Materials such as rubber or plastic that offer high resistance to electrical flow are called insulators.

The rate of electrical flow, or current, is measured in amperes (amps). The electrical pressure that causes current to flow through a conductor is measured in volts. Light fixtures and small appliances operate on 120 volts, electric ranges and other heavy-duty appliances require 240 volts.

The amount of power delivered by a current under pressure to a lamp or appliance is measured in watts. To determine watts, multiply amps times volts. A thousand watts equals a kilowatt. A kilowatt used for an hour is a kilowatt-hour, which is the unit your utility uses to measure and bill for electricity.

To do its job, electricity must flow in a closed loop, or circuit, from a power source to a power user, such as a light bulb, and back to the source. If the circuit is interrupted, the flow stops.

The electricity generated by a power pant and delivered to your home by your local utility is called alternating current (AC). It flows alternately, first in one direction, then in the opposite, completing 60 cycles every second. Batteries supply direct current (DC), which flows in one direction only.

At the business end of an electrical system are the wall outlets, technically called receptacles and switches that make things happen. Inside the hollow walls and ceilings of your house, a maze of wires branches out from the main service panel, located near where the power line enters your house. The main panel is typically on a wall in your basement, utility room or attached garage.

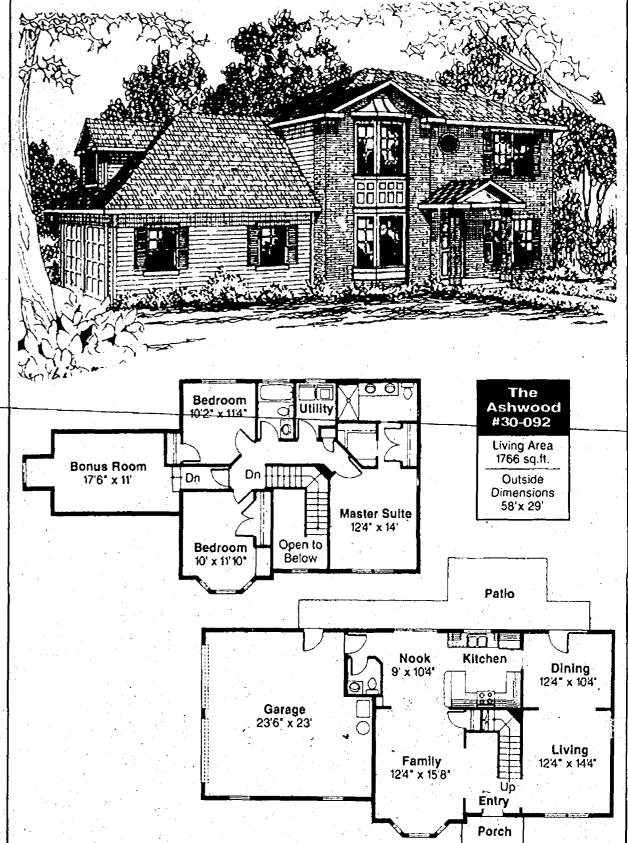

The main electrical power lines usually come from a nearby utility pole. The electrical wires on the pole connect to an electrical grid that connects the entire neighborhood to powerful electrical generators.

The electrical wires at the very top of the pole may carry about 10,000 volts, much more than household wiring can stand. So transformers, the large cylinders you see hanging on utility poles, reduce the voltage to 120 volts, our household standard.

Electrical service is routed from the utility pole to your home and then to the service entrance head located high on one side of the house. Here the utility's wires are spliced to the service entrance wires. These are encased in metal or plastic tubing called conduit.

From the service head, the wires pass through a meter into the main service panel where current is split up and distributed through branch circuits throughout the house.

Branch circuits are designed to carry only a certain amperage - typically 15 or 20 amps. If a circuit draws more amperage than it can handle, the wires can overheat and cause a fire. To prevent this, each circuit is protected at the service panel by an overload protection device. In most homes, this is a circuit breaker, in older homes, a fuse.

2 stories and 3 bedrooms

Intriguing roof lines and window treatments draw eyes to the Ashwood, a twostory midsized home with three bedrooms and three bathrooms. Bold masonry pillars, brick veneer, and stately shutters add to the visual appeal.

© 1997 Associated Designs, Inc.

The main floor is devoted to family living. Formal rooms are on the right, informal rooms on the left. The two sides are connected front and rear by the entry and kitchen, providing young children the option of running circles when bad weather keeps them inside too long.

Fully two stories high, the impressive entry creates a first impression of spaciousness. Light spills down through a small round window, high up in the wall. In the family room, the bay window that expands and brightens the space is a great place to put a cozy window seat.

Sliders in the nook open onto a patio. The kitchen is designed for efficiency, with sink, dishwasher, refrigerator and range all within steps of each other. A short eating bar is handy for snacking, or chatting with folks in the nook. The small bathroom next to the garage is handy for quick pit stops as well as washing up after working outside.

Bedrooms are all on the second level, along with utilities. The master suite boasts two closets, one larger than the other. The master bath is small, but it does have twin lavatories and a larger shower. A pocket door separates the bathroom from the dressing area. Secondary bedrooms share a bathroom with a tub. A deep bonus room over the Ashwood's garage provides plenty of storage space. Its dormer alcove is also ideal for a window

Service available

Oakwood Behavioral Health has expanded to include a new site for Behavioral Health Treatment at the Oakwood Healthcare Center-Canton, located at 7300 Canton Center Road, Blue Cross & Blue Shield of Michigan recently approved the Canton center for mental health outpatient treatment and most other insurances are also accepted. Services will be available to adolescents, adults and families for specialized mental health treatment.

"Depression, anxiety, marital problems, child problems, all of these can be treated on an outpatient basis," said Tom Johnson, administrator over behavioral health services. "New advances in drug therapies have also made it possible to treat patients in an outpatient setting."

The Oakwood Behavioral Health team welcomes the opportunity to work with the community at the Canton location. Referrals to Oakwood Behavioral Health Services may be made by calling 1-800-427-7677.

Oakwood Behavioral Health Services and the Oakwood Healthcare Center-Canton are a part' of the Oakwood Healthcare System, a comprehensive regional network, serving residents over a 500-square-mile area, and operating several hospitals and health systems. Today, the system is a leader in the health field, providing services to more than 1.2 million people in 26 southeastern Michigan communities.

Cancer fight

Like a white knight for breast care, registered nurse Shari Froelich rode the streets of Detroit atop her 1995 Harley Davidson to raise money for the American Cancer Society's breast cancer research program. She was joined by approximately 1,000 other riders in the third annual "Ride for the Cure" Sunday, July 20.

"I'll do anything to increase awareness for breast cancer and breast cancer research," said Froelich, who works as the breast care coordinator for Providence Hospital's Cancer Center.

According to American Cancer Society statistics, nearly 200,000 people have been diagnosed with breast cancer this year. And, in 1997 alone, breast cancer has claimed the lives of more than 44,000 people.

"I deal with some of these patients every day. I anguish with them, I cry with them, I search for hope with them, and I celebrate with them. Research offers hope and I need to be a part of that," she said.

Providence physician Dr. Mary Elizabeth Roth, who has been working with the American Cancer Society in various capacities for 25 years, shares Froelich's passion. Without a motorcycle of her own, however, she served as master of ceremonies at a celebration and awards presentation after the ride.

Awards were given for the youngest rider and passenger, oldest rider and passenger, oldest bike, highest attendance by club or organization and best customized bike.

Roth is currently the division vice president for the Michigan Chapter of the American Cancer Society and on the National Committee on Patient Services and the National Committee on Volunteerism.

Oh, my aching feet

What's blue and yellow, 30 feet long and on a mission to bring relief to Detroit's feet?

The program is all about foot health education, said Steve LaMonte, senior vice president, marketing, Schering-Plough HealthCare Products. Some eight out of 10 adults typically suffer from common foot health problems, he said.

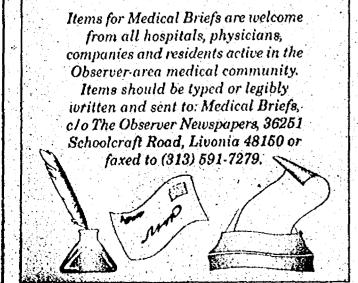

"Feet are the body's foundation - if your feet feel good, you feel good."

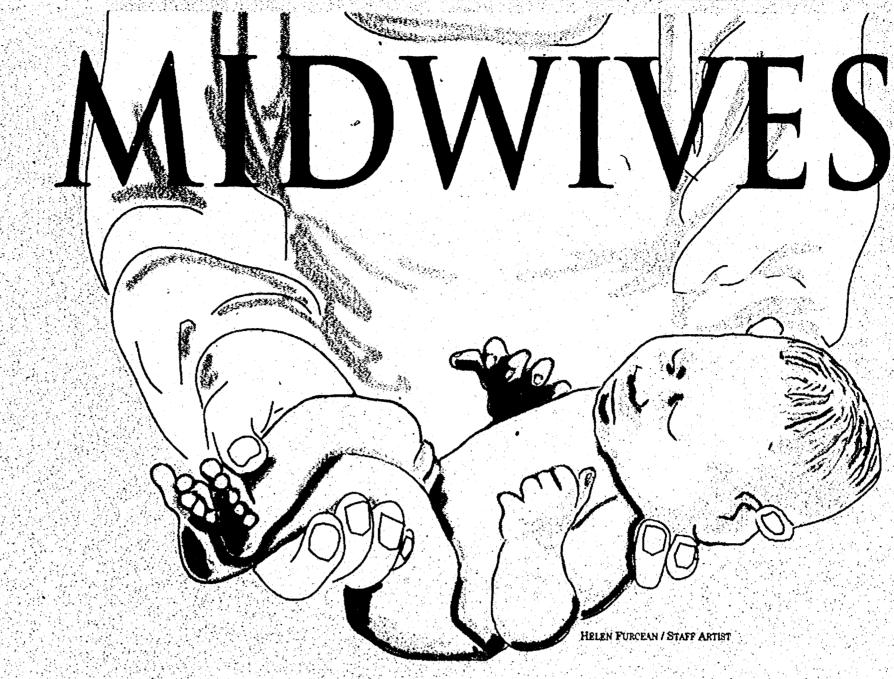

The van was one of two mobile foot care centers that are visiting 22 U.S. cities between April and August. At each location, visitors complete a simple foot health survey. The van staff uses the information to direct visitors to the van service area or areas that are most appropriate. Each van features three service areas:

■ Comfort - the comfort area features a variety of insoles and inserts to bring an extra measure of comfort and relief;

Relief - treatment information and product samples for painful corns and calluses, as well as conditions such as athlete's foot and foot odor are available;

COMFORTING HANDS HELP NATURAL PROCESS

BY DIANE GALE ANDREASSI SPECIAL WRITER

wo day's overdue, Wendy Sulka waited patiently in an office at Henry Ford Health Care System in Livonia for an exam that would tell her if she was close to delivering her baby. Meanwhile, her 7-yearold daughter, Kristen Kozler, climbed a nearby chair and carefully measured her mom's stomach. Sulka's husband, Matthew Kapell, watched from a recliner and kept the atmosphere light with quick jokes.

"It relaxes me having them here," Sulka said, gesturing to her family.

Wendy Valhoff, a Certified Nurse-Midwife (CNM), orchestrates the office visit. Like a patient mother might, Valhoff gently guides Kristen's hand in search of her siblings heart-beat still nestled in Sulka's womb. The comfortable, nurturing and relaxed atmosphere soothes Sulka. That's why she said she chose to see a CNM.

"We encourage family members to come to the office visits, because the birth is a family event," Valhoff said. "Many doctors feel the same way."

Sulka was 20 when she was pregnant with Kristen and saw an obstetrician. This time, she said, she wanted to try something different and chose to be treated by a CNM through the pregnancy and delivery.

'I had seven years to think about that birthing experience and I felt I wasn't involved in taking an active role in that pregnancy," Sulka said. "The obstetrician knew everything. I was educated on birthing, but not actively participating. With this birth I wanted someone who would let me make more decisions in the process. I don't want to give obstetrician a bad name, but for me this seems more natural."

So, Sulka set out to make a birthing plan, detailing exactly what she wanted to happen during the delivery—given that nothing unexpected happened. "When I spoke to Wendy I explained that I wanted Matthew and anyone else I wanted there during the delivery," Sulka said.

Her birth plan also specifies: No labor inducement or any unnecessary tests. She wants to hold the baby immediately after the birth to ensure immediate skin to skin contact; she wants to stay in the hospital as little as possible; she doesn't want her or the baby to be hooked-up to electrical monitors unless there's an immediate medical reason and she's going to try to deliver without pain medication, just as she had with Kristen.

"We always monitor the baby heart rate, but as long as there's no contradictions we try to listen to it intermittently so the mother is more free to use alternative positions. shower if she wants and walk," Valhoff said. "All those things can hasten labor. All the technology is here and we try to use it only when necessary. And that's not to say doctors use it routinely either. It's very important to have the woman know she's the star of the show, we're there to help."

Sulka stressed that going to a midwife doesn't mean having to only follow nature's way. "If I decide mid-way through the delivery that I want an epidural (pain medication). Wendy and I would talk it out," Sulka said, adding that she likes that Valhoff has a lot of time to give her during visits.

Valhoff has promised she will be there during the entire active labor and delivery, which will be in the new Miracle of Life Birthing Center at St. Mary Hospital, also in Livonia. "I wanted this delivery to be a little more personable and peaceful," Sulka added. "Wendy takes great care in explaining every thing in full detail."

When Sulka was eight months pregnant, Valhoff discovered it was in the breech position, meaning the feet faced the birth canal instead of the head facing down the way it should during delivery. At this office visit, both women were relieved that the baby's head was facing down. "Wendy got down on her hands and knees and showed me exercises I could do in bed," Sulka said. "I can't imagine anyone else doing that." Sulka and Kapell initially wanted to deliver their baby at home, but that wouldn't be covered by their medical insurance.

Having a nurse-midwife, they agreed, is a good compromise. "I feel a little more comfortable with a woman who has experience with giving birth," she added. "She has that one-on-one knowledge."

Valhoff has three children and delivered her two grandchildren. Kapell, who teaches anthropology at Wayne State University, said going to a midwife was a good choice for him. He has come to believe, from his studies of the birthing philosophies of many different cultures, that midwives offer a relaxed attitude.

"The rest of the world doesn't look at deliveries the way the United States does," he said. "In the rest of the world, it's looked as a natural process." Valhoff stresses that doctors work hand-in-hand with CNM. In fact, Valhoff's practice includes one other midwife and four obstetricians, all female. Midwives aren't a good choice for pregnant women who have medical conditions like severe asthma, cancer, diabetes and heart disease, for instance. Those women should see physicians who have specialized knowledge in those particular fields, Valhoff said.

"It's a wonderful partnership between obstetricians and midwives, because we help each other in many different ways and compliment each other in many different fashions," she added. Although the idea of going to a midwife is still not the norm in the United States and Canada, midwives deliver the majority of babies throughout the world. And the figures seem to be changing in North America, too.

Almost 17 years ago some 2 percent of the births in the United States were delivered by midwives and now it's about 10 percent. Those figures might be, at least somewhat, the result of misconceptions about midwives. like they aren't educated; they're all elderly; they only assist births at home and that somehow, they aren't aligned with the medical profession. In fact, most CNMs are educated on a masters level and some on a doctoral level; they're certified by the American College of Nurse Midwives after passing a standardized test; all CNMs have the same standard of practice and all are registered Valhoff has a masters degree in nursing, several years of nursing experience and attended midwifery school, a two-year program. She is also a family nurse practitioner. Not all midwives, however, are certified and those practitioners wouldn't have the same qualifications.

The word "midwife" is an ancient term and while some people practice as midwives, they may not be certified or trained by the medical profession. Beyond prenatal care and deliveries, CNMs also perform other gynecological services, like providing various birth control and treating sexually transmitted diseases and infections. They perform regular pap smears, breast exams and counseling. CNMs, don't however, use forceps during delivery or participate in abortions.

Sulka's baby was 10 days overdue as this story went to press.

Improper 'bug bomb' use can be dangerous

Total release foggers, also called "bug bombs," are useful for ridding homes of insects, but Michigan Department of Agriculture Director Dan Wyant warns that improper use can result in explosion and fire.

The foggers release pesticides by means of an aerosol propellant to fumigate an area. The propellants used today replaced chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs), which were banned by the Environmental Protection Agency in the late 1980s. CFCs are

Private One Acre Hilltop Setting Just West of Plymouth

Private Showing Today 1:00-3:00 p.m.

Offered at $689,000

Built in 1991 by Walt Menard and designed with comfort and style for today's lifestyle. From the long winding, tree-lined private road to an austere setting elevated above the surrounding area this home bespeaks panache! Brick walkways lead to the front door which opens to a gracious hall with wood floors and a winding staircase. The traditional design with the living room with its marble fireplace and French doors to the library are to the right with a full bathroom nearby. To the left off the entry hall is the formal dining room. Like most houses this kitchen is the heart of the home! Sun filled and facing South with mellow wood floors. White Bay cabinetry, large work island, state of the art appliances - Jennaire, Sub-Zero, Kitchenaid - all topped with Corian counters make this beautiful kitchen a joy to work in. Adjacent to, and incorporate with, the kitchen is the breakfast room and sunroom. A wall of high, shuttered and beautifully arched windows overlook the back of the property. The first floor service area has access to the three car garage, light filled laundry room, mud room and lavatory. Off this entry is a charming covered porch and brick walks to the deck and beautiful flower gardens.

The master suite has a luxury bath with sculpted ceramic tile, a walk-in closet and a sitting area. The hall has an overlook to the sunroom below and leads to the remaining second floor rooms - a guest room and oversized third bedroom or office. This large room is over the three car garage and works perfectly as an office for the busy executive.

The basement has plenty of storage and holds the mechanical equipment for this property. Let's Talk About Real Estate

"GET PRE-APPROVED"

Mortgage lenders approve and pre-approve loans. An approval is granted after a buyer has agreed to purchase a particular property. A pre-approval is obtained before going to look at available homes for sale. If you are planning on buying a home, it is in your best interest to be pre-approved by a lender before beginning your home search. Here are the benefits:

Knowing your buying power

It is foolish and can be very upsetting to look at homes in a particular price range, only to learn later on that you cannot afford to buy it. A pre-approval lets you know, based on your earnings and current debts, how much money you can borrow. If you know how much you can borrow and the amount of your downpayment, you can look at homes in your price range with confidence that they are affordable.

Peace of mind

It is also nice to begin the home buying process knowing that you will be able to qualify for mortgage financing. If you don't get preapproved, you may make an offer on a house only to find that you are unable to complete the purchase because your ratio of income to debt or credit report prevent you from obtaining the necessary financing.

Negotiating strength

In order to be an attractive buyer to home owners, you must be able to prove that you are serious and able to purchase the home of your choice. Sellers are more inclined to accept an offer from a buyer who can submit a copy of their pre-approval certificate with their offer. The seller knows that if he or she signs, the sale is much more certain than if the buyer has not been pre-approved.

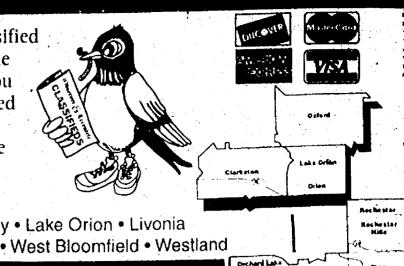

ADVICE: Ask your Realtor to suggest a good mortgage lender in your area.

Are you fit for contracting?

By Sheryl Silver, Career Source

The market for information technology (IT) contractors continues to expand. According to the National Association of Computer Consultant Business, headquartered in Washington, D.C., the demand for temporary computer consultants is growing 20-30 percent annually across the U.S. In many major business centers--including Los Angeles, New York, Newark, Atlanta, and Washington, firms that place IT professionals on a contract or project basis are reporting an extremely intense demand for talent.

"The demand for IT contractors is huge," says Rick Phillips, president and CEO of American Technical Resources (ATR), a technical staffing firm with offices in McLean, Va. and Atlanta Ga. Technology changes, coupled with Year 2000 changes and the difficulty companies are having recruiting full time IT professionals, and demand has never been better."

Pam Murray, recruiting manager for the telecommunications business unit of COMSYS Technical Services in Rockville, Md. is equally ebullient. "The market for consultants is hot," she says. So hot, in fact, it's produced a shortage of qualified contractors. That shortage is severe enough that Cathy Hom, recruiting manager for COMSYS' commercial division in Rockville, says, "We now have to look nationally and internationally as well as locally to find people."

What type of expertise is being sought? "Everything from client server to mainframe skills," says David Claeys, senior vice president of TENTEK Inc., in Glendale, California. To that broad summary, Phillips of ATR adds, "People with communications and Internet/intranet background, as well as those with SAP, Oracle, and Peoplesoft skills." Also on other companies' "most wanted" lists are Oracle programmers and DBA, C++ programmers, testers and Cobol programmers. "With the Year 2K transition gearing up, Cobol programmers are very hot now," says Murray.

As might be expected, the intense demand for contract talent has lead to sizeable increases in hourly pay rates. In fact, Cathy Holdorff, regional manager for Vienna, Va.based Cornell Technical Services Inc., says hourly rates have gotten so high they've proven irresistible for many IT professionals who never considered contracting before. Unfortunately, says Holdorff, not everyone who's attracted and has the technical skills for contracting is a good fit for it. "Not all of them are ready for the uncertainties of being between contracts," says Holdorff.

Many aren't flexible enough either, she adds. "Contracting demands a lot of flexibility," contends Holdorff. "They have to be flexible in terms of the different people and personalities they'll be working with. They also have to be flexible enough to work in a team environment or individually, in a setting that offers total autonomy or in one that's very structured." Flexibility about attire is also necessary, adds Holdorff. "If someone is used to having long hair and a beard, that might not be acceptable for some organizations, she notes. Work schedules can also vary from assignment to assignment, making flexibility about overtime hours a necessity. With all these factors in mind, Holdorff says, "Before jumping into contracting, people should ask themselves, "Am I flexible?"

Phillips agrees that some self-assessment is in order and urges would-be contractors to look at several factors. "If you have a skill set that's not readily marketable, you need to be aware there may be down periods. If you have a low tolerance for risk financially or otherwise, then contracting is probably not a good fit," he says. "On the other hand, if you're confident in your ability to pick up new skills, if your experience and skill set are in mainstream, high demand technologies, then contracting is probably a good fit." It's probably also a good match, says Phillips, "if you prefer working primarily on technical tasks and projects rather than getting involved in management or politics."

Communication skills can also make a difference. Phillips says people who are outgoing and able to communicate well -- verbally and in writing -- are generally in greater demand as contractors. The same is true for those who present themselves with a professional image," he says. "Today IT professionals, including contractors, have a lot of face-to-face interaction with clients."

The growing trend toward casual dress benefits the entire workplace, according to a survey of 505 human resource managers sponsored by the Society for Human Resource Management and Levi Strauss Company, and it doesn't have to compromise wardrobe choice for people who prefer formality. A full 3 per cent of companies surveyed that allow casual clothing permit it five days a week, except when employees meet with Casual dress brings a range of benefits, the survey found. Employee morale goes up, said 85 per cent of the managers, while 45 per cent reported that productivity increases. A full 82 per cent of the group believed that employees would view casual dress as a benefit. Only 10 per cent less felt that employees would cut their wardrobe costs. In addition, 66 per cent of the managers thought that a casual dress policy could be a ploy in recruiting employees.

Conducting proper interviews can head off trouble

By Lindsey Novak Tribune Media

Q: We have had a string of employees who didn't work out for various reasons. We are careful in our screening, but some people who are great at interviewing don't seem to come through on the job. Any suggestions for better screening processes?

A: Interviewing job applicants is a skill as well as a talent. Some interviewers have a natural ability to converse, while obtaining important insights and information on the interviewee, but according to the mail I received, that's not the

A: Your court records were sealed, so you made a serious mistake not listening to your attorney's advice. Beating summer work doldrums

By Alice Bredin, Tribune Media

It has been stuffy and hot in my home office recently because we are learning how the cooling system in our new home office holds up under the intense midsummer heat. So far our system is failing, and we have been adding air conditioners and fans gradually to find the perfect combination of cooling devices.

Even with the fans and air conditioners, I find myself more lethargic in my home office in the summer months. Part of my sloth is attributable to the heat and the fact that not a lot of fresh air circulates around New York City during July and August.

Unfortunately, summer is one of my busiest times of the year, so lethargy is not an option. To combat my malaise, I have been boning up on some ways to keep my energy levels up.

Two of the healthiest and easiest ways to stay alert are to drink lots of water and to get some exercise.

You may have heard the advise that you should drink at least eight to 10 glasses of water a day, but you may not realize how important water can be to your performance in the home office.

The reason water is so crucial is that every chemical reaction that occurs in your brain requires water and, therefore, even a 2 percent reduction in your amount of body water will make you less productive. Tasks such as problem solving, making judgments and responding quickly are all affecting at this

A 5 percent reduction can seriously impair mental functioning. Sometimes when you feel fatigued, you may be experiencing dehydration. If you are not drinking enough water, try these steps to make sure your body is hydrated:

1) Fill a 64-ounce (equivalent to eight 8-ounce glasses) jug or pitcher of water and keep it in your kitchen or office. Drink from that pitcher during the day to ensure that you consume the necessary amount of water.

2) Consumer water gradually, Don't try to get it over with and drink most of your day's quota quickly. Aside from being uncomfortable, you will not have met your body's need for fluid you must take the water in over the course of the day.

3) Avoid dehydrating your body. If you drink coffee or tea you need to consume two cups of water to counteract the dehydrating effects of each cup. Other substances that dehydrate you body include:

• Carbonated, caffeinated

 Decongestants, antihistamines and many prescription drugs.

• Pollution and pollen - they cause your body to "flush" at a faster rate.

Alcohol.

Exercise can also help you stay alert. The job of your cardiopulmonary system (heart and lungs) is to pump oxygen into your blood and then pump the blood around to all the vital places in your body that need it to operate efficiently. As you can image, your brain is one of the major destinations for this blood. Your gray matter makes up only 2 percent of body weight, yet it uses 25 percent of all the oxygen and glucose (blood sugar) you take in.

But when you're sitting at your desk, your lungs breathing quietly, your heart at rest, you are sending less oxygen to your brain than when you're exercising and giving the heart and lungs enough of a workout to encourage blood flow to the brain.

vour desk without a break, vour brain activity naturally slows because those vital ingredients, blood and oxygen, are in lower supply. The practical effect of this situation is that part sluggish brain has a harder time remembering things, coming up with new ideas and solutions, and just plain staying alert.

Sending oxygen-rich blood to your brain will not only increase your energy level, it will help you remember things, solve problems and may even make you feel more optimistic.

Mazda B4000 pickup pulls out all the stops

BY ANNE FRACASSA AVANTI NEWSFEATURES

I was able to pull every single bush out of my yard in a little less than two hours with the 1997 Mazda B4000 SE-5.

We counted them all afterwards. Pulled out, roots and all, were 22 mostly large shrubs and bushes. My two helpers saw me tear up the grass real good, but the truck pulled out all that overgrown foliage with little effort. One bush was particularly stubborn (it had been there more than 20 years, but it came out).

And you know what? I only put it in 4-wheeldrive once. Most of the bushes came out in 2-wheeldrive low.

This is one strong little truck.

Kissin' cousin to the Ford Ranger, the Mazda B4000 is powered by a 160-horsepower 4-liter V6 mated to a 5-speed overdrive transmission. The truck tested was the B4000 SE-5 Cab Plus (extended cab). This is a strong engine that can haul you know what. In fact, the engine is one of the largest and most powerful engines in its class.

It's got 220 pound-feet of torque. That means it's capable of towing up to 5,900 pounds. Or a few bushes around the yard.

After ripping up the yard, we took three trips to the city dump to dispose of all that brush we loaded onto the B4000's flatbed. That's what I call curb-tocurb service.

B4000 roars to life and is quite noisy at first. It didn't bother me too much; trucks are supposed to tant belongings.

If you're considering a really strong truck that can take care of your trailering needs, this Mazda B4000 is an excellent option.

sound throaty.

But the most surprising thing about the B4000 is that it's a true truck in appearance, ride, handling and road feel, but it's so comfortable and livable on the inside.

Face it. A good majority of you commute pretty long distances to work or play, so in fact, you do live in your vehicle. I could live in this one.

Styling is superb on the SE-5. It's really sporty and features chrome front and rear bumpers (finally, a return to chrome) and bright door and tailgate handles. Pinstriping and accent striping is really well done, making it even sportier looking.

In the front, there is room for three passengers. In the rear, you can squeeze another two in the folddown jumpseats. There's a lot of room back there without the passengers to hold a multitude of toys—offers are B2300 and B4000. The B2300 is powered With the windows down and after a cold start, the for your boating excursion. One unique feature is a by a 112-horsepower 2.3-liter four-cylinder engine. cargo area cover for the rear to hide all your impor-

It's a treat to let the kids sit in the front seat, and I could let them in the B4000 because it comes stan-. dard with a key-operated deactivation switch on every truck outfitted with dual airbags.

It's not that important for me any longer, but it is for anyone who has to drive around a child in a rearfacing child safety seat. You can turn off the airbag with just a turn of the key just below the center of the instrument panel.

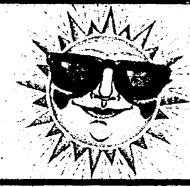

Another wonderful features is the "shift-on-thefly" 4-wheel drive. A small round switch, located on the right side of the steering wheel, can activate 4wheel drive high, low or back to 2 wheel drive with just a flick of the wrist. The front hubs are locked automatically. Very convenient.

Just as an aside, the B-Series trucks that Mazda

Both are offered in two trim levels, with two cab configurations and your choice of ·2- or 4-wheel-drive.

Base price of the B2300 is $12,250. Base price of the B4000 is $16,265. With all the bells and whistles on the B4000 -and ours was loaded to the max -- the grice was $24,375. Didn't want you to get The impression a Mazda truck was out of reach. As always, it's what you put in that makes the price go up.

That said, I was still impressed by the vast amount of standard equipment on the B4000 Cab Plus 4X4: Anti-lock brakes, 60/40 split bench seat, center armtest with storage, consolette with dupholders, AM/FM stereo, tachometer, cargo box light, maplight, headlights on warning chime, dual mirrors, tinted glass, intermittent wipers, power brakes, heavy duty shock absorbers, heavy-duty battery, underbody skid plates and power steer-

Mazda also gives you a tank of gas on the house.

The SE-5 package costs about $4,000 and gives you better tires, alloy wheels, a premium stereo system, sliding rear window, pivoting quarter windows, privacy glass, a cargo cover, air conditioning, towing and payload package, bedliner, passenger air bag, ABS, power windows/locks/mirrors, tilt steering, cruise control and keyless entry.

The bedliner is a must for anyone who is planning on throwing anything back there. But if you don't get the bedliner, you should know that there's a double wall bed and plenty of cargo tie-down hooks. The hooks are there with the bed-

If you're considering a really cute, really strong truck that can really take care of your trailering needs, this Mazda B4000 is an excellent option.
