New Westland park named for Kosowski

LeAnne Rogers
hometownlife.com

Recognizing his work for the Westland Parks and Recreation Department and efforts getting state parks funding, a new park has been named for state Rep. Robert Kosowski.

Although the city council has to officially approve the resolution naming the park at its Oct. 16 meeting, the sign was unveiled and a dedication ceremony has already been held. The newly created park is located adjacent to the Jefferson-Barns Community Vitality Center in Norwayne.

"It's a big honor. I didn't believe it. I couldn't hold back the tears when I was told. It's a legacy. It's very cool," said Kosowski, who was Westland's longest serving parks and recreation director before he retired in 2011 after 20 years. "I really cared about parks and recreation. I would work 14- to 16-hour days. I loved it. I loved serving people."

Kosowski recalled his grandfather working 36 years as a parks and recreation supervisor in Detroit.

"I'd be with him — it was cool. That's what I focused on in college. It worked out," he said. "People could tell me their ideas and I would always listen. I

Certified executive chef Tim Recher knows most of the people who've gathered at Schoolcraft College this week, either in person or by reputation, and has a great deal of respect for all of them.

But considering many of them are evaluating his attempt to become a certified master chef, their reputations, rather than being a calming influence, are making things difficult.

Recher, executive chef at Army Navy Country Club in Alexandria, Va., is one of 10 chefs attempting to earn the coveted designation of certified master chef from the American Culinary Federation.

And considering there are only 65 CMCs in the country right now, it's a pretty big deal.

"It's pretty intense," said Recher, one of eight candidates who made it at

Awards spread early Christmas cheer in Livonia

Matt Jachman

Halloween is still a few weeks away, but it was already Christmas on Wednesday evening at the St. Nicholas Institute in Livonia.

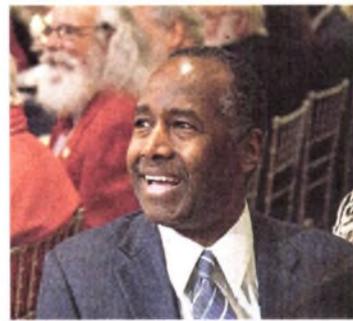

The institute, which promotes the ideals of the historic figure of St. Nicholas and offers annual seminars for professional Santas, honored people that day who carry the saint's spirit into their communities.

The awards gala, at the ballroom at Sacred Heart Byzantine Catholic Church, was full of cheer and stories of Christmases past and attended by 27 institute graduates, many decked out in red and sporting flowing Santa beards. The graduates — 25 Santas and two Mrs. Clauses — were all introduced.

Capping the list of awardees was Detroit native Ben Carson, a famed pediatric neurosurgeon, former presidential candidate and now secretary of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development in President Donald Trump's administration.

Carson and his wife Candy were given an SNI lifetime achievement award for their work on the Carson Scholars Fund, which has distributed more than $6 million in college scholarship money to high-achieving students and established more than 170 Ben Carson Reading Rooms still will always listen to anyone."

A Democrat, Kosowski was first elected to represent 16th District in the state House in 2012. He's term-limited, with his current term ending in 2018, but is running for the state Senate 6th District seat currently held by Hoon-Yung Hopgood, also term-limited.

"We named the park for Bob due to the dollars he has been able to secure and to honor his dedicated service to parks and recreation for all those years," Westland Mayor William Wild said.

One of his visions for Westland, Wild said, has been the revitalization of the Norwayne community. Along with demolishing abandoned and blighted homes and rehabilitating some residences in that part of the city, two years ago the city leased a closed school to be renovated into the Jefferson Barns center. The city's Community Development Department, Nankin Transit, the Norwayne Boxing Club and a host of other programs operate from the center.

As the new community center came together, Kosowski met with Wild to discuss the need for more neighborhood recreation. Kosowski brought much needed grants from the Department of Natural Resources to make the park development possible.

Most recently, Kosowski was able to obtain a $300,000 grant, which is being used for improvements at Voss Park. It was unexpected money, which freed up local and county funding for other parks projects.

The work at Voss Park will convert two of four baseball diamonds into practice football fields and renovate the remaining baseball fields with new fencing bleachers, lights and other improvements.

Formerly a school playground, the new Kosowski Park has baseball diamonds, a basketball court and a playscape. At 3 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 10, the Lincoln Field will be renamed Lincoln-Johnson Field, honoring the contributions of the Johnson family to Norwayne. Henry Johnson, president of the Norwayne Community Citizens Council, will be on hand for the dedication.

least to the third day Tuesday. "A lot of these guys have helped me over the years. They set the example of what we want to achieve. It's a little intimidating, because the accomplishments of all of these chefs are so advanced."

The 10 candidates came from all over the country, from Oregon and Florida, Missouri and Ohio. One candidate, chef Shawn Loving, has the home kitchen advantage — he's the Culinary Arts Department chair at Schoolcraft.

During the exam, which started Sept. 30 and ended Saturday, candidates are tested on healthy cooking, buffet catering, classical cuisine, freestyle cooking, global cuisine, baking and pastry and other cuisines.

Each candidate must maintain an average of 75 (out of a possible 100) for the first six days and then score better than 75 on each of the final two challenges to earn the CMC designation.

"It's eight days of cooking at the highest level and being evaluated by masters of the craft," said Jeremy Abbey, the ACF's director of certification. "It's a rigorous schedule. The nature of the schedule is a challenge and it's eight days of that."

The process for even getting to attempt the exam is nearly as rigorous. Abbey said potential candidates need to be a certified executive chef or a certified culinary administrator and must have two letters of recommendation from current master chefs. To get those letters, the potential candidates have to cook for the letter-writers.

The candidates don't find out what they're cooking until they get to the exam, making their individual cooking skills and their kitchen management abilities paramount.

"They're walking in not knowing what they're going to cook," Abbey said. "They have to be able to execute at the level of the masters of the craft."

It's the first time in three years — "for whatever reason," Abbey said — that the exam has been presented. Abbey estimates that, in the last 10 years, the exam had a 24-percent pass rate. Indeed, by the third day this week, two candidates had already been dropped.

Kevin Gawronski taught in the Schoolcraft culinary arts program for 30 years and retired just three years ago. He was back at the college this week as an evaluator.

Gawronski said evaluators are looking for fundamental cooking skills, obviously, but also for the harder-to-spot intangibles of how the chefs interpret ingredients and build flavors in the meals they're preparing.

"We want to see a higher level of skills, because this is the ultimate test," Gawronski said. "We want them to take it to the 'nth' level."

Each chef is given what he needs and then given a block of time in which to prepare the day's meals. Gawronski said kitchen management is important, but so are those intangibles.

"We look at, what are they adding to it that takes the flavor to an extra level?" Gawronski said. "You're always looking for that one thing they're going to do to take it to that next level."

Recher said the actual cooking isn't necessarily anything different from what they do every day. But the atmosphere created by the masters of the craft who are watching, and the pressure of the certification that's at stake, is ratcheted up.

"We cook every day, so it should be pretty simple," said Recher, who then smiled. "But with these chefs, even doing what we do every day, it's a tough environment."

The results were announced Sunday. For those who make it, Abbey said, the future is brighter.

"The job market, the consulting market ... it opens a lot of doors," Abbey said of the certification.

Also honored, with the SNI's Spirit of Christmases Past, Present and Future award, was Richard P. Kughn, a businessman who owned Lionel Corp., the toy train manufacturer, for about 10 years. In a video shown before Kughn was introduced, he was credited with turning around, in the 1980s, the company behind the iconic toy train sets, which were under-the-Christmas-tree staples for decades.

Kughn, known as "Mr. Lionel," said he would have a toy train set running in his home on Christmas this year and he praised the SNI and the other award winners.

"Each of you in your own way is an example of what this country is all about — opportunity, love, sharing," Kughn said.

» John Foppe, an author and motivational speaker who was born without arms. Foppe invoked faith as he said he overcame his struggles with God's help and, like Kughn, commended the others present for their Christmas generosity.

"What you represent is a child's first foray into faith, by giving them joy, something to wish for," he said.

"What you are doing is so beautiful in making the invisible visible."

» Chief Curtis Caid and the employees of the Livonia Police Department, for their role in Futrell's cash giveaway last year and for helping a homeless

Caid said Futrell had provided "a great opportunity" for the police to reach out and show compassion and praised the city's first responders.

LIVONIA POLICE BRIEFS

Clothing worth $1.5K stolen from Laurel Park booth

Three separate shoplifting incidents, including one in which $1,547 worth of clothing was reported stolen, were reported in Livonia early this month.

The stolen clothing — nine silk jackets, two leather jackets and a pair of leggings — was taken Aug. 15 from the Purple Door Store booth at Laurel Park Place, according to a Livonia Police Department report. The theft was not reported until Monday.

The Purple Door store is a boutique in Wixom that sells handmade jewelry, clothing, decorations and gift items and frequently sells items at a Laurel Park booth. The complainant, an employee, told police she was looking for an item at the booth Aug. 15 when she noticed the other clothing was missing.

She did not see who took the clothing and was planning to get access to mall security video, the report said.

In other reported shoplifting incidents:

» A man took a $38.62 pocket knife from Menards on Middlebelt on Monday afternoon and left without paying, a police report said.

A store security employee told a responding officer that she was watching on a security monitor as a man removed the knife from its packaging and stuck it in the waistband of his pants. He then paid for other items and left the store without paying for the knife, she said.

The employee confronted the man outside, but he was uncooperative and got into the passenger side of a Ford Focus, driven by a woman, which headed north on Middlebelt, she said. Police were unable to locate the vehicle.

The security employee did get a license plate number and police said the Focus was registered to a woman in Marysville in St. Clair County.

» Two men took two security cameras, priced at $329 each, from Menards the evening of Oct. 1 and left without paying. A store security employee reported the shoplifting the next day.

She told police she watched as the man took the cameras and left the store without paying for them. They rode off in a gray Audi, she said.

Longtime Wayne resident, 80, counts miles walked, not just steps

If the idea of the Healthy Wayne Walking Club is to get residents out and active, Lynn Higgs, 80, is ahead of the game.

Higgs joined the club in July. A Healthy Wayne initiative, the program calls for participants to sign up with a walking buddy and then log the amount of time they walk. After 31 days of walking, they can turn in their tracking log at the HYPE Recreation Center in Wayne for a chance to win prizes. They can take as much time as they want or need to fill up the 31-day schedule.

Higgs turned in her log to Beaumont's Healthy Wayne project manager, Lynette Ish-Green, who thought it was filled out incorrectly. In the column for the number of steps, Higgs had entered anything from 1.5 to 8 — and she had entries for every single day. It turns out, Higgs wasn't logging steps — she was logging miles.

"I like to get up in the morning and just go," Higgs said. "It just keeps me busy and makes me feel better. My husband and I were always active and because our kids grew up with that, the kids are all active. I think that's good."

She and her husband Gerald had five kids, who all participated in sports. Higgs started running with them while they trained in junior high school and only stopped jogging when she was 68, as the rigorous activity bothered her surgically-repaired knee. Now, she walks between two and five miles every day and, occasionally, up to eight. "It just keeps you healthy, especially when you get older. Even getting out and walking for 15 minutes a day is beneficial for everyone," she said. "I have a lot of friends younger than I am who are almost sedentary. It really bothers me."

The Wayne Walking Club mirrors programs in Taylor and Trenton, which have also partnered in Beaumont's Healthy Communities initiative. To participate, all anyone has to do is sign up with a walking partner. They're given a Beaumont bag that includes a free pedometer and a lanyard with the walking log so they can track their progress.

"You have to have a partner," Ish-Green said. "If you're doing it alone, you're not necessarily committing to it. With a partner, you can encourage each other. Each of the Healthy Communities is doing some kind of walking activity. The whole idea is to try to get people to add it into their routine."

For completing a schedule, Higgs, a longtime Wayne resident, was entered into a drawing for a new Fitbit. She won, but said she's since passed it on to one of her daughters, who is training for a marathon. She didn't need it, anyway.

"I tried it out for a couple of weeks and it told me I was an over-achiever," she said with a chuckle.

Healthy Wayne was formed through Beaumont Health, the city of Wayne and the Wayne-Westland Community Schools district to promote health initiatives through awareness campaigns, lifestyle activities, events and programming.

SECURING FARMWORKERS' RIGHTS

Ramon Ramirez builds 'bridges of understanding,' improves laborers' lives

CAPI LYNN
USA TODAY NETWORK

Each week, this series will introduce you to an exceptional American who unites, rather than divides, our communities. To read more about the American profiled here and more average Americans doing exceptional things, visit onenation.usatoday.com.

WOODBURN, Ore. - Ramon Ramirez is an unofficial tour guide for Woodburn. His clients are predominantly white, older residents of the community.

They carpool to downtown, to an area sometimes referred to as "Little Mexico," where taquerias and Mexican bakeries are flanked by storefronts selling Hispanic-style clothing. It's a place where not even tamales and pan dulce could ordinarily entice them to visit.

"Because they feared they would be robbed or stabbed," Ramirez said.

Ramirez arranged for local businesses to provide lunch for the guests. They left feeling welcomed and well-fed.

"They were mistaken. They admitted it," Ramirez said. "It ... was a way of saying this is how we can live together."

Ramirez believes in building "bridges of understanding."

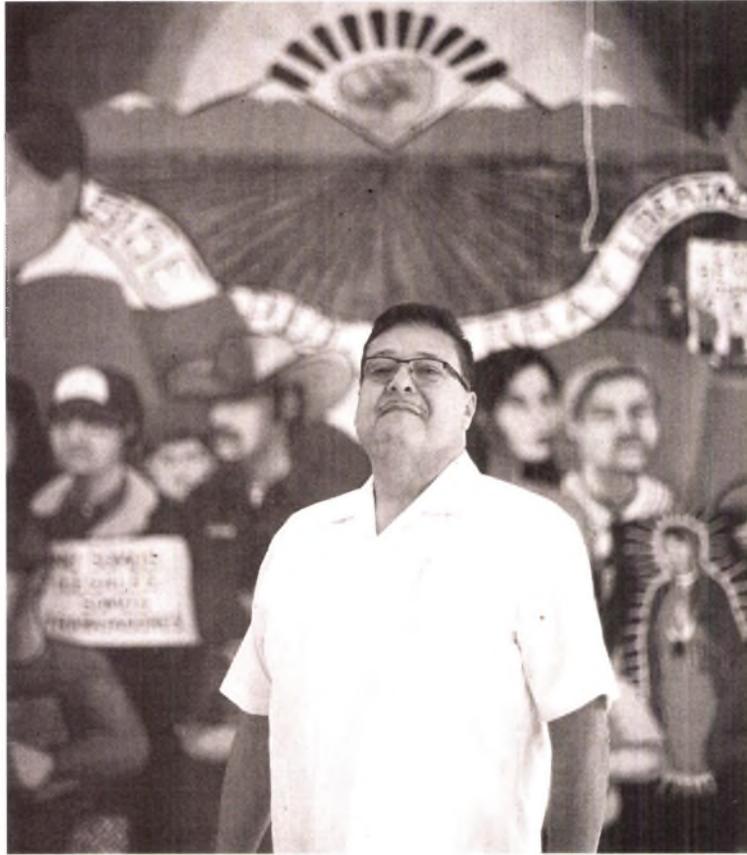

He also organizes tours of farm labor camps, where his real passion is rooted. He has been fighting for farmworkers' rights for more than three decades.

Ramirez co-founded Pinos y Campesinos Unidos del Noroeste, the Oregon union for farmworkers known by its Spanish acronym PCUN, in 1985.

He has been president of PCUN since 1995, watching it grow from a small office providing legal services for local immigrant workers to a nationwide model for integration of Latino immigrants.

Farmworkers in Oregon have improved wages and employee rights because of his work. They are eligible for sick leave and workers' comp. PCUN helped push recent legislation extending Medicaid to undocumented children.

An estimated 200,000 farm workers are scattered across Oregon, and the majority are Spanish speakers earning less than minimum wage.

Ramon Ramirez is the president of Pinos y Campesinos Unidos del Noroeste (Northwest Treeplanters and Farmworkers United), in Woodburn, Ore. ANNA REED/USA TODAY NETWORK

Ramirez said the life expectancy of farm laborers is 49 years, and their risk of cancer is 25 percent higher than that of the general public. He said female farmworkers are 50 percent more likely to suffer miscarriages.

"I think that farmworkers are America's most important workers," Ramirez said. "They are the ones that put food on the table, and they pay a price for doing that."

Q&A WITH RAMON RAMIREZ

What does it mean to you to be an American?

To live in a country free from discrimination, racism, indifference, xenophobia, and a country where you celebrate diversity, because we are a nation of immigrants. ... In order for us to survive as a country, we have to honor the diversity that makes up this country.

What moment touched and motivated you to launch this effort?

When I was in high school, I heard Cesar Chavez speak (in 1970). He advocated for kids to go to school, to get an education, to become doctors, lawyers, nurses and educators, and to come back to the community and serve your community. He had this whole concept of community service, and it really resonated with me. ... I wanted to be part of a movement that helped people and helped build capacity in people. It's kind of like being an educator. When you teach people to read and write, you can never take that away from them. You become a person that empowers others.

What gives you hope or what concerns you?

What concerns me is the political moment that this country's in, where instead of building bridges of understanding, respecting diversity and honoring the past, there's a polarization happening, especially against people of color. The moment that we're in is very dangerous, I think.

What do you hope to accomplish through your efforts?

I think the most important thing is to create change in the community, permanent change in the community. I think we've done that by building institutions. We have, for example, our own radio station, and we have a leadership institute called CAPACES.

Livonia Family YMCA offers updated swim lessons

Although cooler weather is a signal to many people that it is time to put away their bathing suits, the Livonia Family YMCA believes it is the perfect time to head to the pool.

"The fall and winter months provide a great opportunity to learn to swim, or to become a better swimmer," said Julie Koroly, regional manager of aquatic programming for the Y. "This time of year often affords people the chance to get themselves water-ready for next year's warmer months. And currently the Livonia Family YMCA, as well as YMCA branches throughout metro Detroit, are instituting an updated swim lesson program.

"We are putting a priority on safety benchmarks in each of the classes, so that parents and children alike can see a streamlined progression in skills and have a better understanding of what has been learned," Koroly added. "The Y has always made water safety a priority in our swim classes. These updates to the program help put the achievement of those safety-related milestones clearly in the forefront of what we do."

"The YMCA has long been associated with swim lessons in Livonia, Redford, Westland and the surrounding communities," said Brian Wolverton, executive director of the Livonia Family YMCA. "Classes are currently underway for all ages and new seven-week sessions run through fall and winter. The next session will begin on Oct. 30 and winter swim classes begin in January. The Livonia Y also offers semi-private and private lessons year-round.

"There are many opportunities to experience the water when you live in a state like Michigan," Wolverton added, "whether you are boating, swimming or spending time at the beach. Knowing how to swim is vitally important from both a safety and recreational standpoint. We have participants in our swim program as old as 80 who can now take advantage of Michigan lakes in the summer months and a YMCA pool year-round."

The Livonia YMCA also places an importance on children knowing how to swim and knowing how to deal with various situations in the water. "We have parent/child classes for children as young as six months old," Wolverton said. "Many babies at the Y learn how to swim before they know how to walk. We also see first-hand the confidence school-age children gain as they master skills in the pool, which is often transferred to many aspects of their lives, building character and improving self-esteem."

Redford resident Todd Beck agrees with the Y and has 6-year-old son Caeden currently participating in swim lessons, with plans to enroll 3-year-old daughter Londyn as well. "I think it is important for kids to be confident in and around the water,"

Beck said. "Knowing how to swim will benefit my children now and in the future when they are adults. We will enjoy the beach and family activities around the water even more as Caeden and Londyn advance in their skills."

In addition to the safety benchmarks, participants in swim lessons at the Livonia Y will also see a change in the naming of classes. Gone are names like "Polliwog" or "Guppy," long associated with youth swim lessons. "We have changed the naming of our classes to simply refer to each level of the program in stages," Koroly said. "Starting with Stage A and ending with Stage 6, this better reflects where a swimmer stands in terms of abilities and mastery of specific skills."

The YMCA is often the most accessible community resource to prevent drowning and encourage a lifelong enjoyment of swimming. The Y introduced the country to the concept of group swim lessons in 1909, more than 100 years ago, and each year, the Y teaches more than a million children across the country invaluable water safety and swimming skills. YMCA swim lessons are taught by nationally certified instructors and prepare kids, as well as adults to stay safe and have fun in the water.

Michigan is not the only state with a Livonia

Gene Scott
GUEST COLUMNIST

The U.S. has seven Livonias? Yes, there are seven Livonias in the United States. And our Livonia is by far the largest, with an estimated population of 97,000.

Around the world, there have been many Livonias over the centuries. The original Livonia, in eastern Europe/western Russia, dates to the 12th century, when it was a country of Finnish Livonians (Latvians) in a territory they and Baltic Germans controlled on the eastern Baltic coast.

This Livonia became part of Polish-controlled Lithuania in the 16th century and, by 1772, a province of Russia. After World War I, old Livonia was split between Latvia and Estonia. Only fragments of the old Livonia remain and few still speak the language.

Michigan's Livonia began within Wayne County in 1835, when Livonia Township was set off from Nankin Township by the territorial Legislature and vote of its residents. Before then, the area was still mostly populated by Native Americans of the Potawatomi tribe. There were no roads, only trails through the woods and along the rivers.

This began to change after the Indian Treaty of 1807, which opened up areas beyond Detroit for development. Some of the first settlers in what later became Livonia Township included the Aldrich, Hunt, Osband, Ryder and Simmons families. More settlers came after the opening of the Erie Canal in 1825, including the Blues, Briggs, McKinneys and Shaws.

Several of these early families came from the Livonia in New York, bringing the town's name with them.

The township of Livonia had post offices in four 19th century communities — Clarenceville, Elm, Newburgh and Stark. The first was at Newburgh (formerly called Lima and Nankin), 1828-1902. Another, at Base Line (Eight Mile) and Grand River, was called Plank Road and later renamed Clarenceville, 1834-1907.

According to the Michigan Manual and postal records, there also was a small crossroads community called Livonia Centre, at Five Mile and Farmington roads. It had a post office from 1849-65 and a town hall just west of the present city hall.

The post office at Elm, shared by Livonia and Redford townships, operated 1858-1906. The one at Stark (first called Livonia Station) operated 1877-1906.

Clarenceville straddled four townships in Wayne and Oakland counties. It was the fourth stop on the Grand River Plank Road to Lansing. Some early maps include the village of Schwarzburg, which actually was in Nankin Township, now the city of Westland.

Clarenceville, Elm and Stark were stations on the Detroit, Lansing & Lake Michigan Railroad (later called the Detroit, Lansing & Northern, then Pere Marquette). The township population then ranged from 1,200 to 1,500. These stations also were served by the Detroit Urban Railway rail-car system (horse-drawn and later by engine cars), which operated until 1927. The fare into Detroit was a nickel.

All of Livonia Township, including the remaining villages, was incorporated as a city in 1950. With 97,000 residents, Livonia today is one of Michigan's largest cities, ranking ninth behind Detroit (713,000), Grand Rapids (188,000), Warren (134,000), Sterling Heights (129,000), Lansing (114,000), Ann Arbor (113,000), Flint (102,000) and Dearborn (98,000).

What about those six other Livonias around the country? Let's start with the oldest.

The first Livonia established in America is the one in Louisiana, dating to possibly before 1700, when it was under French rule. How it got the name Livonia is uncertain, but there were other places in Europe named Livonia at that time.

Today, the Livonia in Louisiana has a population of 1,330. It's located in Pointe Coupee Parish, west of Baton Rouge and north of U.S. 10.

Next oldest is the Livonia that's just off I-390, near Rochester, N.Y. It dates to 1789 and today has a population of about 1,400. Some of its first residents came from the Livonia in Lithuania, bringing the town's name with them.

This Livonia had been larger in its 19th century heyday, when thousands of families migrated through this area to the Erie Canal and west to Michigan and the Midwest.

Directly east of this Livonia is another smaller Livonia, called Livonia Center. It dates to 1811 and has 420 residents.

The next oldest Livonia is in Indiana. It was founded in 1819 as the village of Bethel. Located in Washington County, on State Route 56 and south of Bloomington, it is a hamlet of 110 residents.

Another Livonia that may have been first settled before 1800 is the one in Pennsylvania, although its official start year is 1834. This Livonia, now a small hamlet of fewer than 50 people, is in Centre County.

The seventh Livonia in the U.S. is in Missouri, a community of 120 in Putnam County, near the Iowa border and south-east of Des Moines. It appears to have first been settled about 1857.

All seven of our nation's Livonias were settled in the 19th century or earlier, taking their names from one of the Livonias in Europe, including the province in western Russia. In Michigan's case, it has been assumed, correctly most likely, that our Livonia was named after the one in New York, since there is no evidence that any of the city's early settlers came from Russia.

Curiously, the Livonia of the 12th century was named because it was not likely to ever be duplicated. Today, in addition to our seven Livonias, there is another in England and at least two Livonia townships, in Minnesota and New York. Also, many people have had the name Livonia or Lavinia, a popular early European name said to mean "gift of God."

More information on Michigan's Livonia and the other Livonias of the nation and the world is available in Wikipedia, World Almanacs, editions of Michigan Censuses and Manuals from 1840, Michigan State Gazetteer and Daniel's, MacGregor's and Paris' books on Livonia (Michigan) history, Burton and Farmer's Detroit/Wayne County histories, Michigan and County Atlases, 1840-1927, Romig's Michigan Place Names and a host of internet websites.

Gene Scott, a retired publicity officer and editor, was a resident of Livonia for 25 years. He has authored three books on Michigan history. He now lives in Novi.

Organist Christian Kreipke, a Livonia native, returns to his home church, St. Paul's Presbyterian, to present a concert at 3 p.m. Oct. 15, titled "America, the Beautiful."

Though Kreipke now performs mainly as a classical organist, he got his start on the organ as a high school student playing at the Redford Theater. He later studied organ with Ray Ferguson at Wayne State University, and was given the opportunity to study in Cuba where he performed for an audience that included Fidel Castro.

St. Paul's Presbyterian Church is at 27475 Five Mile Road, Livonia. A free will offering will be taken. Audience members are invited to an afterglow following the performance. For more information, contact the church office at 734-422-1470.

Don't forget to pick up your welcome packets

It can be tricky to figure out the little details when moving into a new house in a new community. Luckily, there are a few resources, some new and some established, that are here to help those get acquainted to Livonia for us new residents of the city.

I've covered Livonia for hometownlife.com for more than four years and pride myself on trying to know as much as I can about this 36-square-mile city. I've learned plenty more in the last couple of weeks, as my wife and I became homeowners in the city where I spend plenty of my time covering police news, business news and other topics in western Wayne County.

It's been an eye-opening experience to see what's made readily available for newbie residents like us. There are plenty of resources for those purchasing homes in the city during this hot real estate market. One such resource is the new welcome packet put together by city hall. A 17-page digital packet, it features pages dedicated to various city departments.

When is trash pick-up? What are the city's parks and recreation offerings? Who do I talk to get to get on my water bill? And what's the story behind that historical little village at Eight Mile and Newburgh (I'll take this one: that's Greenmead, one of the most intriguing spots in the city). All these and more can be found in this new packet being offered online at the city's website. It can be found at ci.livonia.mi.us/Community/NewResidentWelcomePage.aspx.

And if you're in need of some home improvement advice or other business needs, be sure to take the card mailed to you from the Livonia Chamber of Commerce to its office at 33300 Five Mile, Suite 212, to pick up your welcome bag. The bag, at least when I picked it up, was packed with fliers for local home improvement businesses, community organizations and charities. There was plenty I didn't recognize from the bag, though plenty I did, including info from Tailwaggers 1990, Angela Hospice and the Ian Clemens Foundation, named for the Churchill High School alumnus who died shortly after beginning his freshman year at the University of Michigan four years ago. There may even be a coupon or two to enjoy some of Livonia's eateries (I know I'll be taking advantage of that Awrey's Bakery Long John coffee cake, thank you very much).

And while you're looking for something new in the city for all you newcomers, be sure to check out the print edition of the Livonia Observer and hometownlife.com, the home for news and events in western Wayne and Oakland counties. We're hard at work providing coverage of stories in our local communities, including Livonia, Westland, Farmington Hills, South Lyon and Milford, along with coupons and other services for the businesses in our towns.

I'll see you around town, Livonia, even more than I currently do. Especially when picking up that coffee cake.

Pawlak honored as Veteran of the Month for October

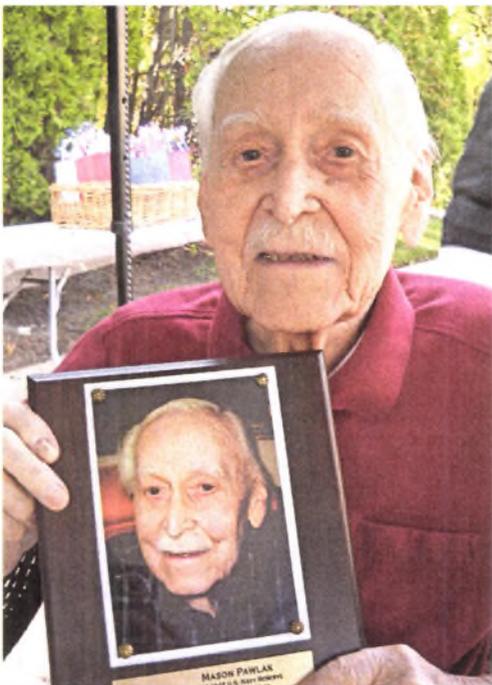

Mason Pawlak, a World War II veteran from Livonia, was honored as the October 2017 Veteran of the Month by the Sons of the American Legion, Squadron 32, of the Myron H. Beals American Legion Post 32 in Livonia.

Pawlak served in the U.S. Navy Reserves from 1938-40 and the U.S. Navy from 1940-46. He was born and raised on Detroit's west side and graduated from Chadsey High School. Pawlak had a passion for photography beginning when he was 12 years old and worked on the school newspaper. He was in the ROTC at school and attended the Citizens Military Training Center in Battle Creek in the summer of his senior year.

A close friend of his wanted to join the navy and Pawlak went with him down to the armory. While there, he noticed a list of all the different positions in the navy and saw "photographer." He signed up with the reserves, hoping to get assigned as a photographer. He was assigned to the U.S. Naval Armory in Detroit as a seaman. He did not have to go to boot camp, because he attended the CMTC.

He was assigned to the USS Dubuque PG-17, a naval patrol combatant ship, as a gun pointer on a four-inch platform gun. He trained in Lake Michigan, using Manitou Island as a backstop for target practice. While serving in the reserves, he had a job with the Detroit Times and the ANS News Service as a photographer.

In 1940, his reserve unit was called to active duty and he and the USS Dubuque set sail from its home port in Detroit to Boston. Pawlak and his unit were assigned as temporary replacements on ships that were short-handed. He served on many different ships as a gunner, patrolling the Atlantic coast from Florida to Iceland. Each time he came back to port, he would ask to be assigned as the ship photographer and, after a year of requesting, was assigned to Norfolk Naval Station in the photo lab.

Merchant supply ships in the Atlantic were being sunk by the Germans and U-boats were blamed, but intelligence suggested the Germans were using South American freighters that they equipped with hidden guns to gain access to the convoys and then sink them. Pawlak was assigned as an aerial photographer, taking pictures of the suspected freighters to determine if they were German or not. He applied and was accepted to the Naval Photography School in Pensacola, Fla., for four months of training.

Pawlak's next stop was the U.S. Naval Base in Hawaii, where he teamed with a pilot to fly reconnaissance missions in the Pacific, searching for enemy ships. On one mission, Pawlak was standing in the open cockpit (to steady the camera) and a Japanese fighter came after them. Pawlak didn't see him, but the pilot did and made a fast right-handed wing over to avoid being shot down. Pawlak lost his balance and was thrown from the cockpit, but caught his foot on the gun turret, which saved him from falling out — but he lost his camera.

In 1944, the U.S. Navy assigned Pawlak to the U.S. Army as a photo war correspondent and eventually assigned him to Yank Magazine as a combat correspondent. This was a major promotion and gave Pawlak officer status, but he had to exchange his navy blues for combat green fatigues.

On Sept. 17, 1944, the 81st Infantry Division, along with Pawlak, stormed the beach on the island of Anguar in the Palau Islands. Pawlak was hit by shrapnel and knocked to the ground. He was bleeding badly and told to get to the medics hut.

He managed to make it to the medics hut, only to find it under attack from enemy artillery and the medics taking cover in a sandbagged fox hole. Pawlak was hospitalized and recovered from his wounds in time to get in on the invasion of Leyte, which opened the Philippines campaign. Pawlak was wounded a second time on Okinawa and received two Purple Hearts and two Bronze Stars during his time in the Pacific.

Pawlak married his wife Emily while on leave in 1942. She died in 2012, two months after their 70th anniversary. Pawlak became an instructor at the School for Photography in Detroit and then opened his own photography studio, Lens Art Photographers, in Detroit. He retired in 1990 and lives in Livonia. Pawlak and Emily have a son and a daughter, four grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Pawlak was interviewed by members of the S.A.L. Veteran of the Month committee and a DVD was made and shown at the October membership meeting. A plaque was presented to Pawlak from Livonia Trophy with his picture and service information. An additional plaque was also put on display in the vestibule of the American Legion Hall. The S.A.L. invites local residents to attend its monthly meetings to listen to the Veteran of the Month. The public is also encouraged to nominate veterans to be honored at its meetings. Nomination forms can be picked up at the American Legion Hall, 9318 Newburgh Road, Livonia, MI 48150.

Who to watch, when to go this season

hometownlife.com

Yes, hockey fans all over metro Detroit can't wait to make the pilgrimage to Little Caesars Arena — the glistening new home of the Red Wings.

But there's another spiffy place to take care of that hockey fix in Plymouth.

USA Hockey Arena will host some of the best young junior players in the United States when the National Team Development Program's Under-18 squad drops the puck Friday, Oct. 13, against Miami (Ohio) University.

Throughout the 2017-18 season, the NTDP U-18 and U-17 teams will square off against college rivals as well as teams in the United States Hockey League.

Fans will have an up-close-and-personal chance to watch potential National Hockey League stars, many already committed to play for major colleges in 2018-19.

Worth checking out

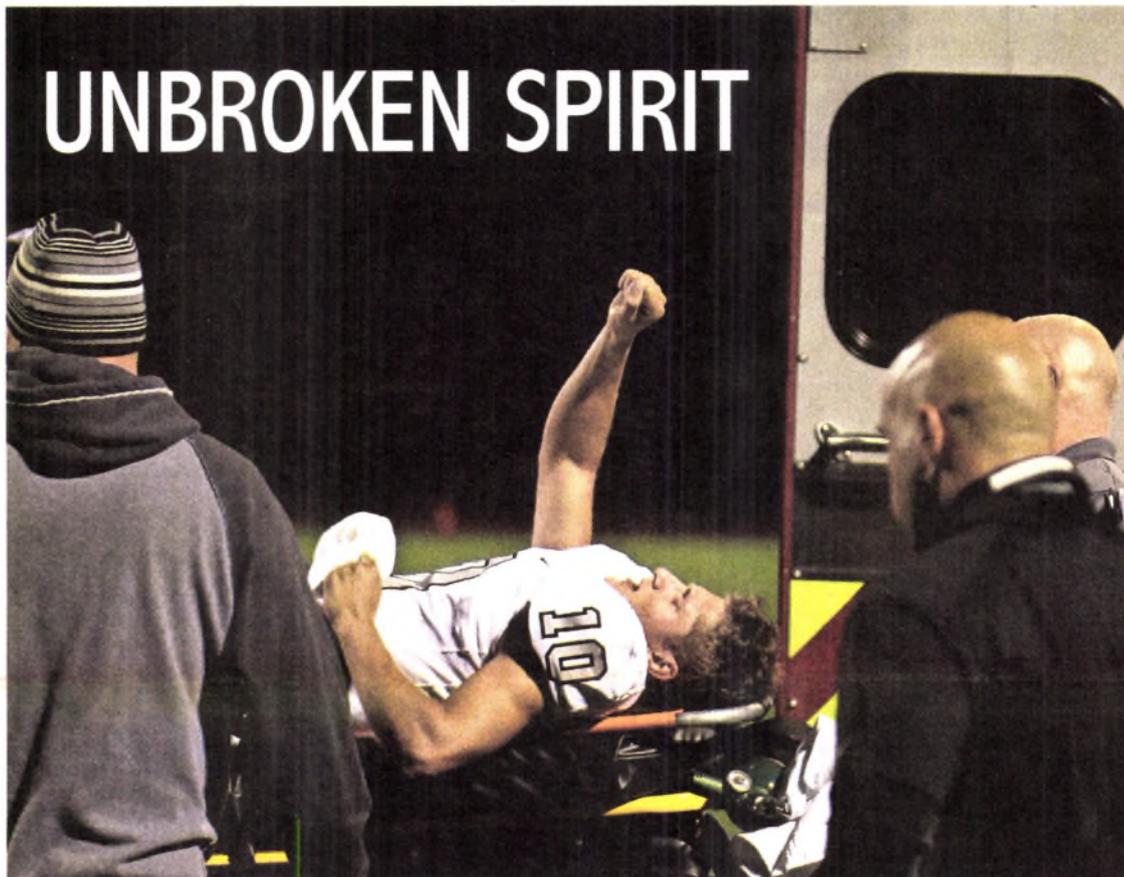

Here's a list of the top-10 USA Hockey NTDP players to watch — with comments from U-18 coach Seth Appert and U-17 coach John Wroblewski — and games to see at the Beck Road venue during the 2017-18 campaign:

Community's love bolsters Plymouth quarterback who broke leg in game

hometownlife.com

Zach Beadle saw the opening and went for it, the Plymouth quarterback looking to spark a comeback for his football team against Livonia Churchill.

In an instant, the play meant nothing. His right leg had snapped between the knee and ankle. Beadle screamed in pain from the turf at Churchill and looks of shock and concern were etched across the faces of teammates, opponents and fans alike.

But what happened in the days following that Sept. 29 Kensington Lakes Activities Association football game meant — and continues to mean — the world to the affable, popular senior.

An outpouring of love and support began that night and really hasn't subsided in the days since.

"It started when I got out of surgery," Beadle said. "I didn't get back to my room until 4 o'clock in the morning. I had two of my teammates there, A.J. Neal and Carson Miller. Robbie Begley was there, Jake Cain stayed as late as he could. And two of our water girls, Marina Malone and Teresa Courney, they were all there for me.

"They got there at about midnight and they were there throughout the entire surgery, which I think was 3½ or four hours. They were there for me when I got up."

Saying thanks

The next morning, Sept. 30, his cellphone was overloaded with messages from well wishers. Many people sent tweets to him, urging him to heal fast.

"I don't even know where to begin by saying thank you," he said. "It meant so much to me to know that, not just my community, but Churchill's football team, their cheerleading team ... even some of their players reached out to me personally."

And the silver lining as far as athletics is concerned is Beadle will probably be able to resume playing baseball next spring for the Wildcats.

"You can't take anything for granted," Beadle said during a Monday telephone interview from his Canton home. "I'm super-thank-

Raiders stop Ravens in key OAA White Division clash

Marty Budner
hometownlife.com

North Farmington's perseverance on the pitch has paid dividends.

The Raiders suffered a heartbreaking 1-0 early-season OAA White Division loss to Birmingham Groves. They couldn't afford another division defeat if they wanted to meet their goal of winning the league crown.

Their efforts were rewarded Tuesday on the road at Royal Oak.

The Raiders entered the game needing a victory and hoping Groves, undefeated in the division, would stumble to last-place Oxford. Shortly after storming past the Ravens, 5-1, the Raiders learned Oxford had scored a late goal to upset Groves, 2-1.

The results left North Farmington as the OAA White Division champion with a 5-1-1 record. Groves was second at 4-1-2.

Second-year head coach Erika Rust said North simply focused on its own play ever since losing to Groves.

"We knew we just had to take care of business on our end and, as long as we did that, maybe we'd catch a break, maybe not," said Rust, a former assistant coach at North. "But regardless of what happened, we would be happy with knowing we'd close out league play with some wins. We knew we had to win our last games to have any chance (of winning the division). That was our mentality."

ful that although the injury was bad, it wasn't anything that could end all sports for my senior year.

"It kind of sucks to say it, but I'm happy it was a bone rather than my ACL or my Achilles or something like that. That would have been a whole year process, at the least. And would have put me out of sports for good."

Painful memory

The sequence that resulted in his broken tibia and fibula remains crystal clear in his mind, although it all seems surreal to look back on now.

Plymouth trailed 28-7 early in the fourth quarter and the Wildcats were on the move. The quarterback carried the ball, trying to chew up some more yardage on the drive.

"I was running the ball up the middle and I went to plant," Beadle said. "My leg was going one way and a lineman fell on it going the other. I just heard a really loud crack and thought it was my knee at first.

"So I tried to kind of pop my knee back into place when I straightened my leg. I tried to get up and I collapsed. I picked my leg up to look at it see what was going on and, about half-way down my shin, I couldn't see anything because it was just dangling there."

Within seconds, Plymouth assistant coach Scott Murray (a retired police officer) and members of Livonia Churchill's medical staff were attending to Beadle to make sure he didn't hyperventilate or perhaps lose consciousness.

"I started screaming and, within a few seconds, coach Murray was over the top of me, helping me control my breathing before I was in shock or passed out," Beadle said. "While I didn't have to deal with the complications of passing out, it was probably better that I just put up with the pain. He seemed like he knew exactly what he was doing."

It would be about 20 minutes before the ambulance was able to transport him to nearby Livonia St. Mary's Hospital, where he would soon undergo surgery.

During that span, parents Rosie and Steve Beadle rushed to Zach's aid and his sister, Plymouth freshman Alaina (on the varsity cheerleading squad), hurried on to the field to be near her badly injured sibling.

"I didn't hear the sound, but I knew it was him because I saw (Plymouth football player) A.J. (Neal) running towards the sidelines and I saw his facial expression," Rosie Beadle said. "I went flying out of the stands like I was running a race.

"The coaches brought us out there and Zach just said, 'Mom, please don't cry.' We told him we loved him and the coaches were amazing. Our coaching staff was absolutely fabulous. Churchill's medical staff that was there was absolutely fabulous."

Could have been worse

The injured player also came to realize that broken bones heal faster than torn knee ligaments. It means that, with determination, many physical therapy sessions and time itself, he'll at least be able to play baseball again.

"I know if everything goes well and I do what I'm supposed to, I'll be all set for my senior year for baseball," Beadle said. "I was talking to (Plymouth) coach (Jason) Crain a little bit. I'm going to work my way into catching a lot more. I won't catch nearly as often as I would have to start the season.

"And then he'll work me in so, by the end of the season, I'm ready to go for all the really important games."

Crain, who was at the hospital to lend support to the Beadles, said talk of playing baseball is premature. But he wouldn't put it past the kid who doesn't know when to stop.

"You know what? He's a great kid," Crain said. "He's a hard worker, he hits a speed bump along his path. Fortunately, it was a clean break rather than an ankle or knee or something like that. In time, it will heal up and should be as strong as ever.

"It doesn't surprise me that he's got the attitude he does. I'm sure there was some disappointment that evening, aside from the pain he was in.

Disappointment in the fact his high school football career is done. I'm sure thoughts of his other sports came into mind, but I think once cooler minds prevailed and he was talking to doctors, I think he's excited to put the work in to contribute on the baseball field."

Rosie Beadle also firmly believes her son's career as an athlete — both at Plymouth High School and, hopefully, at a college to be determined — isn't over.

"Zachary is one determined young man, that is for sure," she said. "He handled this like an absolute champ. Mom learned from him, I think, this time. ... I was quite impressed.

"He wants to catch; that's his dream. He does (want to play college baseball). He loves to play all of them, but baseball's the one he's always wanted to play in college."

Just amazing

Beadle likely will go from a splint to a hard cast in the next week or so and then begin physical therapy in December. It could be April before the all-go sign is given.

Until then, he'll be as active around his high school as he possibly can be, whether in a wheelchair or on crutches. That's because he wants to repay the love that's been shown to him during a traumatic episode in his young life.

His mom doubles down on that sentiment.

"My house is decorated," she said. "I have posters outside, I have posters inside. Everything's just been an absolutely huge support system for him and for all of us. All the boosters, everyone's been amazing.

"It's like a full house here. It already started as soon as school was out (the following Monday), actually. They're already piling in."

Meanwhile, Crain, who played baseball at Canton High School and dealt with injuries himself, emphasized that the best medicine for Beadle and other student-athletes who find themselves on the shelf is to still be part of things — something that playing sports has a tendency to do for people.

"It's certainly a risk that they take and we took as youngsters, at some point," Crain said about high school athletes having their career cut short due to injury. "But honestly, I don't think any of them would do it any other way. There's so many good times and life lessons and friends that are made on the athletic field, whether it's baseball, basketball, football, hockey — go down the list.

"They would not give up those moments for anything. I know I wouldn't."

Drew DeRidder, goalie,

U-18: Already committed to play Big Ten hockey at Michigan State University, the Fenton resident could be a difference-maker.

Appert's take: "Drew is an ultra-competitive goalie who has great athleticism and quickness. He has strong experience being a starter in the USHL last year and winning a gold medal at the Youth Olympics."

Bode Wilde, defenseman,

U-18: Area fans will want to check out the Birmingham resident's skill set. Wilde already is committed to play at Harvard University and is projected to be selected in the 2018 National Hockey League Entry Draft.

Appert's take: "Bode is a high-end offensive defenseman. He has the skating ability and stick skill to become great in our transition game, while possessing a heavy shot on the power play. He can also add physical play and a mean streak on the defensive end."

Mattias Samuelsson, defenseman, U-18: Ticketed to play college hockey at Michigan, Samuelsson also is projected to be drafted in the first round at next year's NHL draft.

Appert's take: "Mattias is a big (6-4), mobile and highly intelligent two-way defenseman. He has the hockey sense and skill to create offense, while being very difficult to play against defensively with his size, skating ability and

Jonathan Gruden, forward,

U-18: One of several Michiganders on the roster (Rochester), it promises to be a key season for Gruden, who will play college hockey at Miami University.

Appert's take: "Gruden is a complete two-way center. He has many offensive talents, but he is at his best when he brings out his high-end competitiveness. The more he competes and plays at a high pace, the more offense he creates."

Oliver Wahlstrom, forward, U-18: Yet another potential NHL first-rounder, Wahlstrom will look to continue making a big impression against college, international and USHL rivals. He is slated to go to Harvard University after leaving the NTDP.

Appert's take: "Ollie is a world-class goal scorer and a power forward. He has the rare ability to break people down one-vs.-one and a shot that can beat goalies from anywhere in the offensive zone. He combines that with the strength and work ethic of a power forward."

Joel Farabee, forward, U-18: Farabee moved up to the U-18 team during the 2016-17 season and will be called upon in myriad key situations. His future college hockey home is Boston University.

Appert's take: "Joel is a 200-foot hockey player and a high-end competitor. He has the skill and creativity of an offensive player, combined with the toughness and blue-collar work ethic of a checking player. He also has the courage to score goals in high-traffic areas."

Domenick Fensore, defense, U-17: Just 5-6 and 140 pounds, NTDP officials describe the New York state native as "small, but intriguing."

Wroblewski's take: "Dom is electric and versatile, a true hockey player. He's always playing on angles and is constantly involved in the attack."

Jack Hughes, forward,

U-17: The younger brother of ex-NTDP player and current Michigan defenseman Quinn Hughes is a virtual lock to be taken by an NHL team in the 2019 draft.

Wroblewski's take: "Hughes blends high-end quickness, creativity and skill and is always involved in scoring chances. We have a collection of dynamic forwards on this team and Jack is there in the top tier."

Ryder Rolston, forward, U-17: The resident of Birmingham and a product of the Little Caesars youth hockey organization, Rolston intends to take another assertive step in his development. He already has verbally committed to play at Notre Dame.

Wroblewski's take: "Rolston is a late emerging player that earned his way into the NTDP at the tryout camp. He will not be outworked and that hunger will be a defining characteristic of his game. We're anticipating a huge jump in his game over the two seasons as he starts to fill out."

Danny Weight, forward,

U-17: Son of a former NHL great, the 5-11, 187-pounder is yet another prospective NHL draft choice down the road. Weight is verbally committed to join Boston College following his time in the NTDP.

Wroblewski's take: "Danny Weight is a playmaker. He understands spacial awareness and the opposition's gap extremely well. His deception and passing efficiency is on another level from players in his age group."

"We weren't at all confident with Oxford beating Groves. It's not a knock on Oxford, it's just that the odds were against that happening. So actually, as our game ended, their score on twitter was 1-1 and we just kind of waited around as a team to hear the final result — and we were able to celebrate.

"It was a great feeling to wrap up the division title," she added. "The guys really earned it. In our losses and tie, in both of those games, we felt we didn't play our best. We just weren't finishing. That's why (the Royal Oak) game was so nice for us. We finished at both ends of the field."

Defense is team strength

Rust, who played soccer at Sterling Heights Stevenson High School and at the University of Detroit-Mercy, had eight returning varsity players entering this season. She felt all along this was a team capable of winning the division title.

"Looking at the teams in our league, we knew that anyone could beat anyone on any given day," Rust said. "It was just a matter of putting solid performances throughout league play, not having a day off."

North Farmington's forte this year is its stingy 3-5-2 formation.

The Raiders have registered nine shutouts, including five in division action. They are 8-3-3 overall, with their only other losses coming to OAA Red Division member Berkeley and traditional state power Detroit Country Day in non-league action.

Senior goalie Zachary Shuk, a first-year varsity player who has been absolutely spectacular with eight shutouts, spearheads the defense. He has been supported defensively by seniors Jarryn Shin, Jake Selinsky, Zarvan Chinoy and Zach Worthing, plus juniors Diego Verde and Ryan Morgott.

ness right away by storming to a 3-0 halftime lead. The Raiders added a pair of second-half goals before the host Ravens broke the shutout late in the game.

Junior forward Hunter Washington paced the offense with a pair of goals. Seniors Matthew Swarthout, Anthony Damiani and Andrew Goerge accounted for the other Raiders goals.

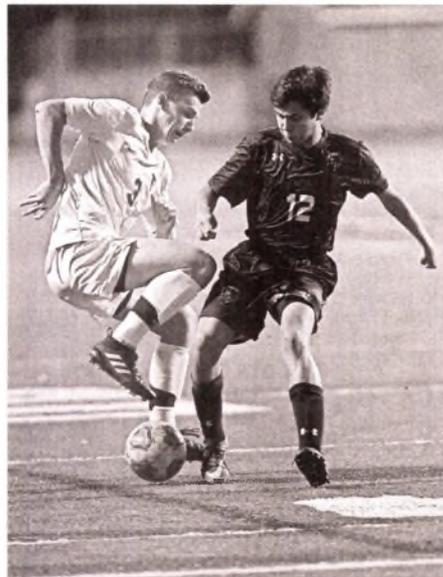

"It was a nice bounce-back win for us since we lost in our previous (non-league) game to Detroit Country Day," Rust said. "They scored very late in the game. We kind of fell asleep a little bit after going up 5-0, but it was a great shot by them."

Now that they've won the White Division title, the Raiders are focused on their two other goals: winning the city and district titles.

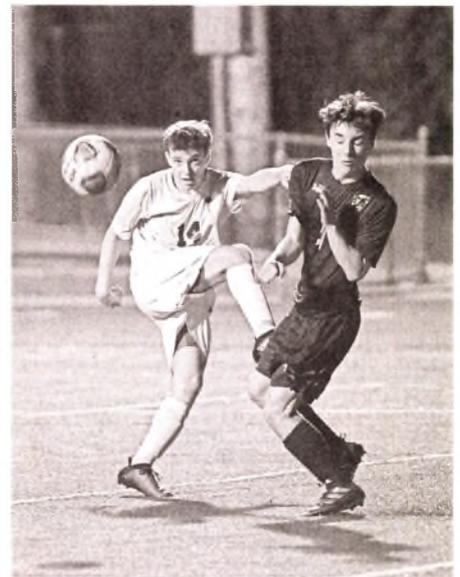

North Farmington will host Farmington on Thursday with the city title on the line. The Raiders will play in the Division 1 district at Livonia Stevenson.

"It's nice that we've already met one of our goals," Rust said. "We just want to focus on putting it all together, being opportunistic with our chances and maintaining strong defense. We have four games to get ready of refocus for districts."

Groves misses chance to wrap up division crown

hometownlife.com

Birmingham Groves had a chance to wrap up the OAA White Division boys soccer championship Tuesday.

Playing on their home field, the Falcons hosted an Oxford team that was winless in the division and had won just two games all season. A win would give Groves the outright title over North Farmington.

But things did not go so smoothly for head coach Jonathan Turner's unlucky squad.

Despite outshooting the visiting Wildcats by a 24-13 margin, holding a 7-0 advantage in corner kicks and controlling the majority of second-half action, Groves suffered a heartbreaking 2-1 defeat.

A few minutes after the game, Turner learned that North Farmington defeated Royal Oak, which lifted the Raiders to the White title with a 5-1-1 record. The Falcons finished second at 4-1-2.

"It's disappointing, to say the least," Turner said. "This was a game where it seemed like we could have come out and taken advantage of them, but Oxford played like they wanted to beat us."

"Here's the thing. I think, like anything else, when a team knows there's another team fighting for a title and they have a chance to be a spoiler, I think teams step up to that. Oxford did that tonight. I think they only had three opportunities and they scored on two of them."

"That's why I love soccer and hate soccer. We're dominating the entire game and firing shots at will and they have a couple of opportunities and take advantage of them," he added. "It's a shame. Our guys have worked really hard and it just didn't pay out in the end."

"It's disappointing, to say the least. This was a game where it seemed like we could have come out and taken advantage of them, but Oxford played like they wanted to beat us."

JONATHAN TURNER
Groves coach

An ominous beginning

In an ominous beginning for Groves, it was Oxford which took the early lead in a wide open first half that featured 20 combined shots, 13 by the Falcons.

Senior midfielder Mitchel Morawski scored the first goal five minutes into the game, when he stole the ball from a Groves defender and rushed untouched toward the net. Morawski's low shot stayed on the ground and beat Groves goalie Christian Williams, who had come out in an attempt to cut the angle.

The Falcons were forced to play catch-up right away.

Groves had a number of solid chances, finally beating Oxford freshman goalie Tristan Bennett at the 28:14 mark. Junior forward Amedeo Crovasce rushed down the left wing and rolled in his shot to the far right side, past a sliding Bennett.

Groves had a flurry of chances to score late in the first half, but could not beat Bennett, who kept the Wildcats in the game with a number of spectacular saves. Isaac Thompson, Spencer Tredwell and Evan McCulloch all came up short on great scoring chances for the Falcons.

Breaking the deadlock

Despite all those opportunities, the game was tied 1-1 at halftime and remained deadlocked through 35 minutes of the second half. It appeared as if it would stay that way.

But Oxford pulled off the stunner with 4:58 remaining, when sophomore midfielder Christopher Escalante picked up a rebound and booted it home for what proved to be the game-winner. Williams made the initial save on a hard shot from the right wing, but the ball ended up on the foot of Escalante, who did not miss the wide open net.

The Falcons pressed over the final four minutes in an effort to tie. But frustration set in and they were slapped with a red card, which left them one player short for the final two minutes. Part of Groves' agony derived from the fact it had two goals called on offside calls.

"We, obviously, have to score and their goalie played off his rocker. He kept them in and that had an impact," Turner said. "But sometimes it seems as if we're playing against two teams and that doesn't seem right. I'm not sure about the first offside. But on the second one, it looked like we had made a delayed run and he was on, but I'd have to look at the video to see for sure. But it is what it is."

"And, unfortunately, we have to do a better job of composing ourselves when we're dealing with that kind of adversity," he said. "We didn't deal with it well and, as a coach, I'm embarrassed about that. I don't want to stand for a program that's known for being like that."

Turner was disappointed that Groves couldn't capitalize on its many chances.

"There's no question we had many opportunities," Turner said. "I feel comfortable in the fact these guys worked hard, but they just couldn't find the net. These guys are going to learn from this."

"They don't like the feeling, which I can imagine most guys wouldn't," he added. "But we'll get back to this and take a chance at it in two weeks in the districts."

In a KLAA double dual meet on Oct. 3, Plymouth prevailed 16-45 over Livonia Franklin and also bested the shorthanded Rockets, who only had four runners. Franklin also defeated John Glenn. Medalist was Plymouth's Ethan Byrnes (16:16), followed by teammates Carter Solomon (16:18), Patrick Byrnes (16:52) and Tyler Mussen (17:08) in places 2-4. In fifth with a time of 17:19 was Franklin's Jackson Nordbeck, while Plymouth's Brandon Boyd came in sixth with a mark of 17:26. Rounding out the top 10 were Franklin's Logan Evanchuk (seventh, 17:41), Plymouth's Adam Stepek (eighth, 17:49), Jarrett Warner (ninth, 17:51) and Basil Syed (10th, 18:04). In 11th place for the Patriots was Joe Nichol (18:11).

NOVI 3, CANTON 0:

The two Miss Volleyball candidates, Abryanna Cannon (18 kills, 12 digs) and setter Erin O'Leary (41 assist-to-kills, eight kills), sparked the Wildcats (29-3) to the 25-15, 25-18, 25-14 KLAA crossover triumph Oct. 3 at home over the Chiefs. Other Novi contributions came from Katherine Ellison (12 kills, 17 digs) and Claire Pinkerton (13 digs).

BRIGHTON 3, PLYMOUTH 0:

The visiting Wildcats fell short Oct. 3 and could not carry over the momentum of their big win Sept. 28 against Westland John Glenn. Standouts for Plymouth against Brighton included Lauren Wheeler (nine assists), Kayla Courtney (four digs) and Grace Balch (five digs). Courtney (returning from injury) and Kenna White each had 11 kills in the 3-0 road win over John Glenn while Wheeler chipped in with 35 assists and eight digs.

HOWELL 3, SALEM 0: On Oct. 3 at Howell, the Rocks played better than the final outcome, coach Brian Theut noted.

NORTHVILLE INVITATIONAL:

On Sept. 30, Temperance Bedford gained revenge defeating the host Mustangs (29-6-2) in the championship, 25-21, 25-22. Northville finished 4-1-1 on the day defeating Walled Lake Western, Marysville, Dearborn Edsel Ford and Grosse Pointe Northville, while tying Romeo in pool play. Brianna Maccoux led Northville's hitting attack with 27 total kills on the day, while adding 43 digs. Libero Hannah Grant had 59 digs and 10 ace serves. Setter Rachel Holmes had 85 assists and 17 digs. Other leaders for the Mustangs included setter Morgan Rodgers (26 kills), Christina Valentini (20 kills), Jessica Hogan (18 kills), Clare McNamara (10 kills), Jenna Boksha (10 kills) and Ally Zayan (11 digs).

BOYS SOCCER

NORTHVILLE 3, BRIGHTON 1:

Felipe McCarthy had pair of goals as the Mustangs (10-3-1, 3-1) earned a make-up match victory Oct. 2 over the host Bulldogs at Sloan Field. No scoring occurred after play was halted with 9:36 left in the first half in a KLAA Gold Division game from Sept. 21. Andrew Mitchell added a goal and assist, while Yianni Kanellopoulos was the winning goalkeeper as the Mustangs improved to 8-2 overall in the KLAA.

CANTON 1, PLYMOUTH 5:

In the second game of the Soccer World Park Cup series, held Oct. 2, the campus rivals played to this hard-fought draw. Canton goalkeeper Sean O'Meara was strong, making 13 saves and only giving up a penalty kick goal to Plymouth's Bennett Brooks. Answering with a goal for the Chiefs was Jordan Fourney, assisted by Nick Yono.

Spartans starting to get healthy, tie Rocks

hometownlife.com

Livonia Stevenson rolled out the welcome mat Sept. 28 for previously injured players Tanner Brose and Andrew Barry for its KLAA boys soccer match-up against visiting Salem.

And the reinforcements couldn't have come soon enough for an injury-depleted Spartans roster, as Brose scored on two penalty kicks in a come-from-behind 2-2 tie.

"This is probably the best game he's had since he's been back," Stevenson head coach Ken Shingledecker said about Brose, a senior forward. "He looks fully healthy. But we were without him all last week and we just hit a rough stretch with a bunch of guys injured. We got a couple back to night and it made a massive difference for us."

Brose opened the scoring at 12:15 of the first half, when he ripped a low liner past Salem junior goalkeeper Oral Buraq on a penalty kick (awarded due to a hand ball in the box).

The Rocks, who have been at or near the top of the standings in the KLAA Black all season, took the lead on two goals in the second half by senior forward Jason Warras. He tied the game in the 62nd minute, when he raced down the left side of the field and drove the ball past onrushing Stevenson senior keeper Dylan Jesmore.

Warras made it a 2-1 game with 18:01 to go, when he received a nice feed from junior midfielder Hudson Shields, wheeled inside the box and blasted a hard shot past the Spartans' goalie.

"Jason's done well. He creates a lot of chances up top," Salem head coach Kyle Karns said. "Extremely dynamic player, got two goals for us tonight, which should have been enough. He's a huge part of our offense right now."

It wasn't enough because of Stevenson's persistent offensive push, with Brose in the middle of things.

Another player just back from injury, senior forward Lucas Rea, teamed up with senior midfielder Zak Merchant for a dangerous attempt that caromed off the left post.

On the subsequent sequence, a Spartan was fouled inside the box and a PK was called.

"We got a good buildup and we played it through to Merchant," Brose said. "He did a great job trying to finish, hit the post and then Rea worked his butt off to get there and just got shoved in the box. We were able to finish."

Stevenson's record moved to 8-2-3 overall (No. 5 in the rankings), while Salem is 9-5-2.

Meanwhile, Karns still see positives coming out of the contest.

"I felt like we, in certain stages of the game, we were able to play well," Karns said. "We got tons of chances and it just didn't work out."

COLLEGE SOCCER

WORLD OF DIFFERENCE

NO CULTURE CLASH AS QUARTET FROM VENEZUELA LEADING SCHOOLCRAFT RISE TO CONTENTION

Tim Smith
hometownlife.com

Blazing heat that transforms a soccer pitch into a turf-covered stove top doesn't slow the Schoolcraft College men's soccer team in the least.

Of course, it shouldn't be a surprise when the 2017 Ocelots feature a roster composed of players from Venezuela, Brazil, Jamaica and Iraq.

That melting pot of a squad — coached by longtime Schoolcraft veteran Rick Larson and an undeniable contender in the Michigan Community College Athletic Association — roasted visiting Lake Michigan College, 12-0, on Sept. 22.

And right in the middle of the fun, as usual, were Venezuelans Mikel Ibanez (sophomore midfielder), Carlos Martinez and Carlos Valbuena (freshman defenders) and Juan Gomez (freshman goalkeeper).

"We got to keep going until nationals and then we can say we're good," Ibanez said. "Not yet. Our team, we have players from all over the world, from Mexico, from Africa, from Jamaica, from Venezuela. We have a lot of players, international players."

Valbuena, who stressed that he and his countrymen refer to the sport they excel at as "football," played this summer for AFC Ann Arbor. Then, he met Larson and saw the sparkling soccer facilities at Schoolcraft, which include the St. Joe's Sports Dome that towers over I-275 in Livonia.

"I have a friend who was an All-American twice, he played here (Schoolcraft), like, six years ago, Marco Lobo," Valbuena said. "He also played at Western (Michigan). He told me, like, four years ago if I ever wanted to come and play some college at good level, the doors were open."

"I moved to Ann Arbor four months ago, from Miami. I was with AFC Ann Arbor for the summer and, after (that), I decided to play some college and they introduced me to Rick. I saw the facilities and the coaching staff and players were awesome."

What about the boiling heat for the early afternoon tilt against the Red Hawks?

"I will say it's hotter there (Venezuela), the part where I'm from, which is more like the coast," Valbuena said. "It gets to 100 every day."

Gomez said Larson "contacted an alumni from the school that works with bringing players from my country to play college football and he gave me the opportunity to come here."

A destination

Schoolcraft's reputation as a standout program for a number of years makes it an easier call for Venezuelans and other international players to find their way to Livonia.

"I knew they were a top 10 team for a while and they have won championships," Gomez said. "So it was a nice opportunity to come here."

The goalie, who is living with a billet family, said he is fluent enough in Spanish and English to communicate with whoever might be in the back with him.

"Sometimes, I got half my defense speaks Spanish and the other half speaks English," Gomez said with a smile. "I switch idioms, I switch the languages a lot."

The Ocelots continue to turn the heat up on MCCAAs rivals, scoring goals in bunches and rarely getting scored against. As of the win over Lake Michigan, Schoolcraft remained first in the conference and region.

"We love what (the Venezuelans) bring to the table," Larson said. "They're leaders in the way that they're very professional about the way they take care of themselves, about the way they train and the intricacies of the game."

"They really love the details of soccer. We're able to have in-depth conversations about the nuances of particular positions and particular situations."

Everyone benefits

Americans on the squad, such as Observerland alums Jordan Whitt (Livonia Franklin), Alex Spratte (Plymouth), David Tetaj (Farmington Hills Harrison) and Nyle Ellis (Westland John Glenn), also welcome the international players. Their arrival is essential to all players raising the bar on their own performance level.

"When my returning players come in, they know there's going to be an influx of international players," Larson said. "And they're kind of chomping at the bit in an excited way to figure out what those players are going to look like, who they're going to be, where they're from."

Patrick Yelsik, of Schoolcraft's athletic department, added that the college as a whole also benefits from having international players on the field.

"We're extremely fortunate to have international student-athletes like these guys on our teams," Yelsik said. "How they open our awareness to different cultures and perspectives and give us a better world view is invaluable."

Ibanez said there also is a winning atmosphere away from the field and no sign of cliques.

"We're trying to make the new guys feel comfortable with us," Ibanez said. "With this team, it wasn't hard. Everyone is friendly with each other, we're a good team."

"We have fun and work hard," Valbuena said. "In every team, there's always three or four players who are a little better than the others."

"But this team is more like a family. That's what I think has been taking us far and probably take us farther."

Home cooking

The year-round dome also houses the elite Michigan Wolves (males) and Michigan Hawks (females), as well as Livonia youth soccer teams.

"A big part of why we want to do so well at home — a big mission for them (Ocelots) is to go undefeated at home — is because there's Wolves players watching us," Larson said. "And they come in after our games and we share this complex. We want top-level Wolves players to play in our program."

Meanwhile, players from other countries are enjoying life at Schoolcraft College, maybe even enough to hold off on possibly moving on to a four-year college in 2018-19.

"There's always a chance to transfer," Valbuena said. "But I think I'll stay here because of the coaching staff, the facilities."

"Plus we have a good squad that we're trying to take to nationals."

Those are magical words in any language.

PREP ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

MIKAELA SCHULZ

GIRLS GOLF JUNIOR
BLOOMFIELD HILLS BLACK HAWKS

WHAT SHE DID: Schulz was individual medalist at the prestigious Oakland County Girls Golf Championships held Sept. 20 at the Pontiac Country Club. The third-year varsity golfer shot a two-under par-70 that included an eagle on the par-5 second hole. "I started off really well. I was focusing on making sure that I took it one shot at a time, worrying about the next shot and not the overall picture," Schulz said. "I was putting well and striking the ball well and not making too many errors which helped me." Just as importantly, she was happy to help lead Bloomfield Hills to its first ever Oakland County team title. "In general I was pleased with my round and glad that I could help my team to the victory," she said. "Our team played great that day."

WHAT SHE SAID ABOUT BEING NAMED ATHLETE OF THE WEEK: Schulz had trailed early in the voting but received a huge boost from family and friends around school, the golf team and even club members at Tam O'Shanter. "It's a really big honor for me," said Schulz. "I appreciate all the people who supported me and voted for me. My mom shared it on Facebook and a lot of her friends voted and also a lot of my golf friends and people in school. And my country club, Tam O'Shanter, shared the link, had everyone voting and was a big support. It's really exciting and fun."

WHAT SHE SAID ABOUT THE UPCOMING STATE TOURNAMENT: Schulz was second-low medalist at last year's Division 1 state tournament. She is hoping to improve on that finish this fall. "First things first, we hope to do well at regionals and assuming we advance I really want to win states," Schulz said. "It was a big goal of mine last year and I fell just short. I really want to perform better this year and shoot some low scores."

What are the pros and cons of job hopping?

BY PETER JONES
THEJOBNETWORK

The jury remains out on job hopping. Most people agree the stigma is mostly gone, particularly if you're in the unique brand of circumstances that makes it the wisest move for your career. But there are still pros and cons — even if you think it's all good or all bad.

JOB HOPPING PROS

Finding yourself. If you're not entirely sure what you want to do with your life, a few job hops early on can actually be very useful in saving you valuable time. Just be mindful to figure out what you like and start pointing yourself in that direction with some force and purpose.

Variety is fun. They don't call it the spice of life for nothing. You get that many more opportunities to make sure you find the right fit—as well as a fresh take on things with each new company.

But remember, the novelty wears off very quickly. Make sure to get accustomed also to the routine of working a job for more than a few months.

Networking, networking, networking. You can amass a truly powerful network by job hopping. Just make sure you're actually making lasting connections and not just blowing through people for the sake of it.

You'll grow as a person. You'll meet more people, you'll work in a broader range of diverse fields and institutions and you'll be exposed to a much wider variety of information and resources. This can really build your versatility, and indeed, your attractiveness as a long-term hire, provided you shape your experience mindfully.

A cash increase. Jumping to a new position, when done right, almost always ends up with you making a bit more money — often more than a routine raise.

JOB HOPPING CONS
Relationships are in danger. Gaining experience by job hopping might get you a bunch of bullets on your resume, but it won't necessarily get you a good recommendation, and it won't help you build the kind of relationships that make for a long and successful career. The last thing you want to do is give the impression that you're unreliable.

Employers might hesitate. If you have a track record of loving and leaving, so to speak, employers might be hesitant to hire you.

Or worse, they might put you on the chopping block first if or when lay-offs are in order — before you've had a chance to prove your loyalty. Basically, they fear you'll jump ship at the first sign of trouble. And, to be fair, they have no counter evidence.

Lack of satisfaction. If you don't stick around long enough to really reap some of the slow-release, long-term benefits of company loyalty, you'll miss a potentially truly enjoyable part of your career.

Greener grass syndrome. If you get into a pattern of job hopping, you might start to fall victim to the trap of always thinking the grass is greener in some other job or other career.

Try to find a place to settle down when you can and when appropriate. Otherwise, you'll develop a long list of shallow experiences and expertise, and never reap the sweet rewards of loyalty.

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

SUBARU GAINS FANS, SALES FOR IMPREZA BY INTRODUCING ALL-NEW 2017 VERSION WITH TECHNOLOGY, OTHER UPGRADES

By Dale Buss

Subaru has completely redesigned the Impreza for 2017 as the brand continues to pile up sales and take market share from much bigger rivals. Impreza wasn't at the top of the list of reasons that Subaru has gained traction, but the new version of the small nameplate — available as a sedan or hatchback — certainly will move it up a few notches.

The brand is an intriguing one. For something whose name is so Japanese, and a company that is Japanese, Subaru seems more like a brand and a car lineup designed by Americans, for Americans.

Sure, there's the crunchy element of the brand — after all, Subaru recently ran a TV advertisement that literally depicted the grandchild of someone who was at Woodstock hugging the tree where she and grandpa met back in their dissipate days. But if you talk with Tom Doll, the chief of Subaru in the United States, he explains that progressives are just who Subaru's market is.

Yet it's hard not for everyone to love Subaru. The brand loves dogs and tells you so. It has become associated with tough slogging through difficult weather because all of its vehicles are all-wheel drive — and have been for a long time.

And how can a Midwesterner not like a company that's now making many of its vehicles in Indiana?

So even though Subaru sales not too long ago were up by 20 and 25 percent a year in the U.S. over the previous year, its gains have backed off recently to an annualized level of about 6 to 8 percent a year over 2016, Doll recently told the Philadelphia Inquirer. But that's in the context of an overall U.S. market that faces the possibility of its first year of decline in eight years.

Which brings us to the new Impreza. The nameplate never has had as much cached or sales volume as Subaru's beloved Outback or Forester SUVs, and Legacy was always the brand's primary sedan.

Impreza offers a sedan version.

But Americans are showing tremendous appreciation for the new Impreza: Sales through August this year were up by more than 40 percent over 2016, far outpacing volumes for Legacy and giving Impreza the best year-to-year relative performance of any vehicle in the Subaru lineup.

It's not difficult to see why buyers are demonstrating unprecedented appreciation for Impreza nowadays. It was completely redesigned for 2017 and, while Subaru never has been a design-forward company, the new lines put Impreza well within the mainstream — which, for this vehicle, is a good thing.

Impreza has always been known for its roomy interior, but the new version moves the wheels further apart to open up additional space in the cabin. And pop open the rear of the hatchback version to the kind of cargo space that matches some small SUVs: more than 55 cubic feet with the rear seat down.

latest versions of several useful safety features, such as Subaru's proprietary EyeSight Driver Assist Technology that includes adaptive cruise control, automatic pre-collision braking, lane departure and sway warning, and lane keep assist.

Including EyeSight as an option on Impreza gives great value for buyers of a car that comes even fully loaded for under $30,000. And it underscores Subaru's commitment to occupant safety, one of its primary brand values.

In fact, WardsAuto recently recognized Impreza on its 10 Best User Experience list for intuitive and effective features including connectivity, infotainment, controls and driver-assist technology as well as overall value.

Subaru also added power for its four-cylinder, 2.0-liter, dual-overhead-cam engine, which now generates 152 horsepower and 145 pound-feet of torque. It's no speed burner, but then most Subaru customers don't are about that. They do care that Impreza notches an impressive 37 mpg on the highway and 28 mpg in the city.

Subaru's 2017 Impreza Hatchback is a very timely offering for today's market.

The rear of the Impreza hatchback is plenty roomy for its segment.
